Bus Bankruptcy Order Set Aside
Eugene-UPH-A bankruptcy order against City Transit Lines of Eugene and Salem was vacated here Monday by Federal Judge William East at the request of the firm's attorney.

The move allowed the company to file an answer to a creditor's petition on which the written order was based. Judge East, who conducted the hearing here said the hearing would be continued in Portland within the next two weeks.

A group of former bus drivers for City Transit filed the involuntary bankruptcy petition to get about $16,000 in back wages they claim the company owes them. Judge East, while setting aside the bankruptcy order, declined to remove a court-appointed receivership against the company.

Wilderness Bill Witnesses Heard

San Francisco-UPH-A Senate committee heard 66 witnesses state their opinions on Monday on the controversial "Wilderness Bill" which would set aside some wilderness areas as federal preserves.

Opinion on the proposal varied during the one-day hearing before the committee, headed by Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.).

Those favoring the bill were mainly scientists and conservationists, while mining and timber interests led the opposition. Because of the number of witnesses, Neuberger limited individual arguments to five minutes.

Philip R. Bradley of the California Mining Board, said the bill would curtail development of mineral resources essential to national defense. David R. Brower, executive director of the Sierra Club, a California Hiking Organization, said "unbridled commercialism born of self-interest is the greatest threat there is to the beauty of America."

Miss Wick ran for Congress as an independent in the fall of 1934 and in 1936 ran for mayor under the slogan "A Kiss For Everyone In Portland" before withdrawing in favor of another candidate.

Rezoning Interchange Areas Is Deferred by City Commission

William Brooks, building contractor, asked the Medford planning commission last night to postpone rezoning by the Barnett rd. interchange along the Highway 99 freeway through the valley. He said a motel, filling station and recreational facilities were planned there.

In other action, three public hearings on granting sign variances were deferred pending a discussion of policy in the joint meeting with the council.

The commission received for further study a recommendation for revising multiple family zoning and a report on wrecking yard restrictions.

Owners Object
Three owners of property on Barnett rd. spoke against the proposed zone change. They were especially critical of the service station idea.

The planners' decision to postpone action was anticipated. Those members present at an interim policy meeting Oct. 27 had agreed to defer rezoning interchange areas pending development of the freeway program.

Postponement of action on the sign variances resulted from a city council decision last week. On a recommendation by Councilman Donald Hansen the council referred a recommendation by the planners that one such variance be approved to a joint meeting.

According to Ordinance
Hansen pointed out that according to the zoning ordinance, variances are to be granted only when practical confiscation of property would otherwise result.

City hall observers pointed out, however, that in spite of the ordinance it has been a council practice to permit variances when other circumstances warrant.

The proposal for revising multiple family zoning corresponds to the suggestion made at the Oct. 27 interim meeting by Lloyd Anderson, planning consultant from the University of Oregon's bureau of municipal and regional planning.

Zone Divided
The zone would be divided into two sections. The first would be limited to single family, two family and multiple family dwellings. The second would include other uses currently allowed in multiple family zones, such as professional and vocational office buildings, churches, clinics, hotels without stores and public buildings.

If and when revisions were approved, Duff pointed out, the present multiple family areas would have to be rezoned in accordance with them.

Duff read a report from Ned Langford, city planning technician, on wrecking yards. Problems cited were air pollution from burning, creation of blight areas and dispersal of residential areas.

Restrictions Suggested
Restrictions suggested in the report include location adjacent to an arterial street; setback of 100 feet; at least 500 feet from a residential area; completely indoors or surrounded by a view-obstructing fence at least eight feet high; no scrap piled higher than the fence; and no burning.

M. Thomas Wray, president of the commission, appointed himself a committee to study the matter further.

The commission gave tentative approval to the plat for Hillcrest Memorial Park cemetery on North Phoenix rd. about 1 1/2 miles southeast of Medford.

It denied a zone-change request for property at the intersection of Springbrook and Delta Waters rds. The request was for a change from single

Two Portland Boys Meted Prison Terms

Portland-UPH-Five-year prison terms were given to two 16-year-old boys in Circuit Court here Monday by Judge Virgil H. Langtry for the armed holdup of a city bus driver last summer.

The judge said efforts to rehabilitate the youths, who both had long records, were "exhausted." Both boys are from Portland.

Because of the severity of the sentences one of the boys, Bruce Victor Jones, wept. The other youth, Paul Russell Kraemer, stood passive when the sentence was passed but shouted defiance as he was being taken back to a cell in the county jail.

The two pleaded guilty to robbing bus driver David L. Patterson of $108 Aug. 14 while his bus was stopped in Northeast Portland. A third youth, Melvin C. Petersen, 19, who also pleaded guilty to the robbery, will be sentenced by Circuit Judge James Bain.

Today the industry must grapple with sustained yield, allowable cuts, government timber appraisals, road specifications, mounting taxes and a host of similar questions, he said.

Hult said finding a proper approach to the problems was the task facing the Congress. The organization is in its 49th year.
