Deaf Mutes Face Execution in Ohio

Columbus, Ohio (UPI) – Two brothers will die in the electric chair Friday, unless they get a reprieve, in what is believed would be the first execution of deaf mutes in Ohio history.

Bert, 17, and Joseph Buza, 21, convicted of first degree murder in the stabbing of an elderly gas station owner, waited in death row while their family and counsel sought a clemency decision from Gov. C. William O'Neill.

The two have occupied side-by-side cells in Ohio Penitentiary for one year. They were convicted by a Belmont county jury Nov. 15, 1957 and began their sentence one day later.

Amendment for Bonds Authorized

Under this law, a city can pay off such bonds by the revenue from the new facilities plus the special assessments.

But such "revenue" bonds, City Attorney E. Roy Bashaw told the council last night, would not be salable. Only general obligation bonds, he said, would find ready purchasers. Hence the need for a city-wide election, since the voters must approve incurring this responsibility obligation.

Danger of Assessment

Bashaw pointed out that the danger of "Mr. Taxpayer" having to pay any assessment himself as a result of this obligation was slight.

He said he could see only three instances where this might occur. All three concern the special assessment district: a mistake in apportioning the assessments; property values not sufficient; or delays in foreclosing on delinquent properties.

In case of delayed foreclosures at least, it is understood, money could be borrowed from the city's general fund, and subsequently repaid.
