Portland—Victor Birdseye, Jackson county dairy producer, was appointed to the board of directors of the Oregon Dairy Council at their annual meeting.

As one of nine men representing Oregon dairy producers and distributors, Birdseye will help direct the nutrition education program of the Oregon Dairy Council. The state wide program, which stresses the importance of good eating habits, serves schools and community leaders with nutrition information and materials.

Construction of New Station Starts

Construction of the new Prospect Ranger station in the Rogue River National Forest was started this week by Fordyce and Samples, Medford, according to C. E. Brown, forest supervisor.

When completed, the new station will house personnel of the Prospect Ranger station who have occupied temporary quarters since the district was created in January, 1958.

Present construction plans include four three-bedroom residences, an office, gas and oil house, water and sewerage systems, and a well and pump. Occupancy is planned for May, 1959.
