

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mildred M. — Mother gets on our nerves.
Matthew S. — It is the daughter's responsibility to take care of her.

Mildred M. — I have been married less than a year. Shortly after my marriage my father died. My husband and I asked my mother to come and live with us at once.

Mother kept saying she didn't want to interfere with our lives, but we insisted that she would be no trouble to us. Well, things haven't worked out as we had hoped. Mother does get on our nerves in many little ways. She seems to think she still has the right to tell me what to do and not to do. She gets hurt if we don't include her in all our activities.

I think that if she stayed with my brother and his family, she would keep more to herself. My brother and his wife have three small children and she could help them out. My sister-in-law is a very strong person and Mother wouldn't try to boss her as she does me.

Matthew S. — Mother has always said to both of us that she was so happy she had a daughter, because it is much easier for an elderly woman to live with a daughter than a daughter-in-law. She said she would always feel unwanted, like a stranger in the house, if she had to live with a daughter-in-law.

Mother understands very well that my wife doesn't want her to live with us. If I were to ask her to make the change, she would immediately understand that Millie doesn't want her. It would be like kicking her out in the cold.

Everyone knows that it is the girl's responsibility to take care of a widowed mother. Millie shouldn't try to duck out. She must learn to cope with the problem. She should tell Mother off when she has to in order to insure her freedom.

The Council: It is important to note that Mother has been completely left out of these negotiations between brother and sister.

It is very likely that Mother has been finding life with Mildred and her husband to be quite a trial. This woman evidently had a particular plan for her life as a widow, but like many women in this spot, she finds that things aren't working out according to her dream picture.

Even with the best intentions in the world, parents find it almost impossible to refrain from interfering in their children's lives. Often, they claim that they are not "interfering" — merely expressing an opinion. But the authority that the parent's word has always carried is a factor in taking away a child's own feeling of power and independence. The parent similarly feels deprived of power, and hence, cast out, when a grown son or daughter flouts him.

This mother made a mistake in accepting her daughter's hospitality before she had a chance to think seriously and calmly about her widowhood. In her sadness and loneliness, she accepted the apparently easy solution. But the time has come for her to re-evaluate her future. If she is in good health, she may very well be ready to consider living alone or with another woman. Some elderly persons find that they can board much more happily with a family that is not their own.

As long as this mother is of sound body and mind, her children should allow and encourage her to decide her fate. (Copyright 1958. General Features Corp.)
