Beirut, Lebanon—(UPI)—Twenty-two Iraqi army officers have been arrested in a purge of followers of Col. Abdel Salem Aref, reports from Baghdad said.

Aref was one of the leaders of the Iraqi revolution and was jailed last week.

Those arrested included the deputy commander of army intelligence, but there were no further details.

Diary of a Bird Watcher

Saturday, Nov. 8

A lady called me up wondering what might be wrong because the birds did not come to a feeder that her husband had made and set up. I told her it often took the birds a while to find a feeder, especially one that had the look of newness. But with the coming of cooler weather and an increasing shortage of food the birds will look harder to discover available sources.

The number of people who feed birds must be very large. Most of us do it for our own pleasure in seeing the birds around as much as for the good of the birds. However, I am sure it does help to support a larger population of birds than could exist otherwise. The one principle that I try to follow in feeding birds is to be regular with it. If the birds become accustomed to finding food at a certain place and it is not there, they may go hungry. This is especially true when you feed in the late afternoon as I do, because if they do not have enough food and the night is cold they may perish. The few flocks of birds make a warm covering, but they also have good furnaces inside them and they must have food to stoke the furnace.

Sunday, Nov. 9

I was talking to J. H. on the phone and he asked me whether more house sparrows had come down my way. He devised a shocker on his feeding tray so that when they gang up on it he can give them enough of a shock to make them want to move elsewhere. Luckily they do not seem to have come down here. I have been feeding fairly late in the day and have had relatively few house sparrows when I throw out the chick scratch. They do tend to monopolize the suet feeder, though.

Speaking of house sparrows, I was reading today in an English bird book lent me by J. H. that probably starlings and house sparrows are the most widely distributed birds in the world. They have either been introduced or gone on their own to a great many different places. Why people have introduced them I don't know. We must credit them both with being highly adaptable creatures.

Monday, Nov. 10

This being a school holiday as well as a preacher's day off we decided to take a trip to Lake of the Woods. My son and his boy friend were along, so we didn't make bird watching our primary objective. We wanted them to have fun and for some strange reason they haven't discovered that bird watching is fun. We found snow before we had reached the top of the Dead Indian grade and there was some all the way to the lake. It was very pretty on the trees and we (my wife, that is) took some pictures. At the lake it was quiet and pleasant. The summer crowds had dispersed. Cool breezes blew and it was rather chilly picnicing in the open.

There were a number of birds on the water. The only ones I identified were cool, eared grebe and bufflehead ducks. On land we saw the inevitable juncos and Steller's and gray jays. The latter are the kind commonly called "camp robbers." On the way home, near the foot of the Dead Indian grade we saw a golden eagle. An eagle is always a fine bird to see, when you are lucky enough to find one.

Tuesday, Nov. 11

At about 4:30 p.m. I took a drive out north of town looking to see if I could find the place where robins or starlings were roosting. I didn't find that but I saw a most gorgeous sunset of many changing colors. As the dusk was deepening I saw four marsh hawks hunting for mice in the meadows above Hoover lakes.

Thursday, Nov. 13

I received a letter down at the Mail Tribune office. It enclosed a most remarkable bird picture clipped from an eastern newspaper. It shows a cardinal feeding a goldfish at the edge of backyard pool. It says the cardinal did this for a period of about two weeks. Birds will instinctively feed babies other than their own, but how one ever got started feeding goldfish is more than I can fathom. I guess that is why we have newspapers - to tell us about the things happening that we would never expect.—T.M.

6 Million Feet of Timber Sold by BLM

The Medford district of the bureau of land management sold an estimated 6,305,000 board feet of timber for a total of $137,237.70 at an oral auction sale held in Medford on Nov. 13.

Kogap Manufacturing company, Medford, bought the largest sale, which consisted of an estimated 5,128,000 board feet located near Hyatt lake in Jackson county. Their total bid was $99,602.90 and the bid for the two major species was $27.60 per thousand board feet for the Douglas-fir and $17 for the white fir. The white fir accounted for about 68 per cent of the total volume on this sale.

Waters Creek Sale
Clayton R. Hassell of Ashland purchased an estimated 1,109,000 board feet located on Water creek in Josephine county for $36,677.60 after raising the price of Douglas-fir, the major species, to $35.20 per thousand board feet.

Two small sales were sold at the appraised prices when no competitive interest developed. One containing an estimated 33,000 board feet was purchased by Greensprings Lumber company of Klamath Falls for $694.70. These trees were sold because they created a hazard at the airstrip near Lincoln in southeast Jackson county.

The other small tract consisted of an estimated 35,000 board feet of beetle killed and blown-down salvage located near the Tiller-Trail highway. It was purchased by Everett Cushman of Shady Cove for $282.50.

Sale Announced
On Dec. 11, the Medford district of the bureau will offer 10 more tracts of timber for sale. They contain an estimated 16,043,000 board feet, appraised at $371,250.65. Five of the tracts and 10,884,000 board feet of the volume are located in Josephine county. Three of them, containing 3,366,000 board feet are in Jackson county, while one each, containing 1,694,000 board feet and 99,000 board feet respectively, are located in Klamath county and Douglas county. The sales range in size from 33,000 to 8,556,000 board feet.

Additional information regarding these proposed sales may be secured from the office of the district manager in the Medford city hall.
