As You Were Saying...

"If I Should Die Before I Wake . . ." Shortly after my first baby was born, I had to return to the hospital for an emergency operation. I was quite worried, not only for myself, but because my infant was only one month old.

In the operating room, they tied a rubber tube on my arm and inserted a needle into the vein. Then the doctor leaned over and said softly, "Now let's ask God to help us through this operation." Just before he finished the prayer, the rubber tube was removed, and I fell unconscious. The last thing I remember was the doctor's voice.

Two days later, when I regained consciousness, I was still listening for the end of his prayer. It was a wonderful experience and certainly renewed my confidence.—Mrs. H. M. Whitten, Yuma, Ariz.

Used Furniture Bought & Sold. When we moved recently, I was faced with the problem of disposing of some items that would not fit in with our new home. One of them was an old writing desk which had accumulated all our old letters, snapshots, receipts, etc.

I called in a second-hand furniture dealer and, after much hemming and hawing, he offered me $6 for the desk. It was worth more but, being desperate, I agreed and began unloading its drawers and pigeonholes. When I was through, there was quite a pile of stuff on the floor.

The dealer gave the pile a worried look, then carted the desk out to his truck. Moments later he was back, still worried, and I prepared myself for what might be an act of charity. "Lady," he said hesitantly, "you're going to need something to put that stuff in. Tell you what: I'll take a beating on it, but I'll sell the desk back for $10."—Mrs. R. O. Infield, Pompano Beach, Fla.

Odd Jobs Done Here. After years of reminding my husband of odd jobs he had to do around the house, I suggested that he keep a card file of such things and save me the trouble of keeping track of them. He agreed rather reluctantly, but within a few weeks the file had grown to unexpected proportions. One day, in his absence, I examined the cards and discovered the reason. Under the various months were filed such reminders as "Time to buy new golf shoes," "Save this week end for fishing," "Make sure TV is working for baseball season."—Mrs. S. M., Burbank, Calif.
