The Medical Roundup by Walter Alvarez

Terrible Epidemics of the Past. Today, a Black Plague could hardly get going because we know that it is due to a tiny germ which is carried to many by fleas that have become infected by living on diseased rats.

Need for Vaccination. We have records of the terrifying epidemics of smallpox which, in the Middle Ages, used to rage across Europe every so often, killing hundreds of thousands, and leaving many other terrible pock-marked. Some 50 years ago, when I first went to Mexico, I was so struck by the fact that practically everyone was pock-marked.

ways in which years ago smallpox practically wiped out the American Indians that they wrote a book about what happens when smallpox hits a group of people who have not been protected by vaccination. Such people die so fast no one can bury them all.

Operations on Children's Hearts

All parents of children who are likely to have an operation on the heart would profit by reading a book called "The Operation" (McGraw-Hill, New York). It is a minute by minute account of a heart operation; also the story of the medical and surgical research that prepared the way for modern heart surgery.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.
