Holidays are fun, but disorganizing. Many of the most reliable club reporters forgot their notices, or brought them in late with plaintive stories of Thanksgiving guests, trips or whatever. Maybe the holiday spirit also accounted for the rash of interesting notes with the stories.

One woman wrote "I am sorry about this messy looking report. I should do it over. However, I am too lazy. Forgive me, please." Well, honest confession is good for the soul, we've always heard.

Another notice said "Please put this where it will do the most good" and still a third read "This is my last time to write our notice. Been nearly six years since I started. Now, some one else will do it, or else." Hmhmhm.

Another note read, simply, "Sorry, too much turkey." The society editor was not immune, either. George, the proofreader, triumphantly sent back to the news room a set of cutlines about today's concert which said it would be held Sunday, March 30.

After hearing William Glombs' first hand account Friday afternoon of how the family's 30-pound turkey burned up in the oven the day before, the news room staff decided the Glombs should give up trying to cook turkey. A couple of years ago one was reduced to a crisp because the oven temperature gauge was not working, and another time the Glombs put a bird in the oven, set the controls and went off to Sunday church services. When they returned home a few hours later they found a cold stove and completely raw turkey. The clock had failed to turn on the oven.

Mr. G. tells a good story and his account of how he scattered 10 pounds of flour all over the kitchen and half the dining room trying to put out the oven fire was a riot for the reporters who gathered around to listen.

Another post-Thanksgiving story comes from the George Rode household. The Rodes decided to raise their own turkeys this year, so they did. Five nice, big, fat turkeys. But the Rodes ended up eating a turkey which Mama Edith bought down town. By now the turkeys are pets of the four Rode children and who would have the nerve to kill and eat a family pet?

Mama Edith also asked the writer of the Thursday editorial — who grew positively sentimental over the old-fashioned Thanksgiving when the family raised turkeys — and papa went out with a hatchet and chopped off a head — if he had ever lived in those good old days and helped to dress a turkey. "I thought not," she said grimly.

The combination of a wedding and the near approach of Oregon's centennial caused a lot of talk in the John Ritter family of Gold Hill about olden days. The Ritter's daughter, Joanne, was married recently to Lee Sanderson, and ancestors of both young people settled here many years ago.

The well known scenic spot, Savage Rapids dam, located on the Rogue river between the town of Rogue River and Grants Pass, was named in honor of the bride's great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Savage. Savage Creek was also named for the family. The bride's paternal great-grandfather, William Cook, lived in the Oregon territory before it was a state. The Sandersons are long-time residents of the Beagle and Sams Valley areas, and the bridegroom's maternal grandmother is Mrs. C. R. Alexander, well known Medford resident.

Potpourri was surprised that there was not a larger audience out to see the Bolshoi ballet film at the Craterian Tuesday night. When the film was shown in New York and other large cities it was hailed as "the event" of the season, even though competing with performances of live ballet by this country's leading dancers. It was an excellent film of absolutely magnificent dancers — Some of the best in the world.

Scarcely a week goes by we do not hear someone complaining that the really good films and musical events are not being seen and heard in Medford. Yet when these films and artists are brought here, they are often not well patronized.

A few years ago Radio Station KYJC here was forced to drop the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts. A sponsor for football wanted the Saturday time, and the station asked for an expression from its listeners. Well over a hundred football fans wrote or called and said "we want football." Exactly four music lovers wrote to ask that the opera broadcast be kept on the air.

Metropolitan broadcasts were resumed yesterday on a different network, and KYJC will carry them this season. However, unless this station, and the network, has solid proof that the program is wanted, it may be dropped another season. Unless music lovers, particularly opera fans, are more responsive than before, they will have no one but themselves to blame if another fine musical program goes off the air here.—O.S.

Philharmonic Concert At Hedrick School Today

The Philharmonic Society of Southern Oregon will open the 1958-59 season with a concert this afternoon at Hedrick Junior High school. Conductor Richard D. Werner will open the program promptly at 3 p.m.

Proceeds of the concert will go to the building fund of the Oregon Shakespearean festival association. Appropriately enough, Angus Bowmer, producing director of the festival, will be heard on the program as narrator for "Peter and the Wolf," the delightful musical tale for children by Prokofieff.

Also on the program will be "Symphonia Concertante" by Mozart, with Mr. Werner and Mrs. Audrey Brist Hartlett as featured violin and viola soloists. Bruno Pellegrini will conduct this number.

The program will open with the "Anakreon" overture, and will also include Debussy's "Pett Suite."

Coffee will be served during intermission.

Musicians who will play and their instruments are Nan Wood and Alexa Hibbard, flute; William Jelski and Merle Welcome, oboes; Ron Bartlett and Mary Gardner, clarinets; Donna McQueen and Treva Toenniges, bassoons; Rae Featherstonhaugh and Robin Miller, horns; Robert Heide and Robert Hogenson, trumpets; Roaul Maddox, Blaine Pruitt and Jack Stong, trombones; Peter Windt, tympani; Audrey Bartlett, Elmer

A bay window off a living room can be painted to suit three decorating schemes. Matching the room's color, it blends in with traditional furniture. In a dark, high-style color, such as turquoise, it becomes modern. Painted white or yellow, it takes on an old-fashioned look.

Teachers Attend Institute

The faculty of St. Mary's grade school will be in Mt. Angel on Monday and Tuesday, December 1 and 2, to attend a Teachers' Institute for all Catholic elementary schools of western Oregon at Mt. Angel college. Six hundred religious and lay teachers will attend. All grade schools in the diocese will be closed both days. Dr. Rex Putnam, state superintendent of school, county school superintendents, parish priests of the diocese, and other outstanding educators of Oregon will be guests of the Institute.

Sponsored by the Most Rev. Edward D. Howard, D.D., archbishop of Portland in Oregon, this institute will emphasize "The Teaching Apostolate," with the theme, "Instruct! Inspire! Ignite!"

The Rev. Edward Zenner of Central High school, Portland will address the general assembly Monday. Suggestions for "Relaxing Tensions in the Teacher's Life" will be offered to the general assembly on Tuesday, by the Rev. William Elliott, S.J., master of novices at Sheridan Novitiate, Sheridan, Ore., and Dr. Gordon Higginson, Ph. D., director of psychological services at the University of Portland.

Baron Fitzpatrick, consultant for case work services with Catholic Charities, will lead discussions for all sections of the Institute on child growth and development and children's emotional problems.

FOR STAR MEETING

Mrs. Virgil Wilkes and Mrs. Anna Dial will be the hostess committee for the next meeting of Adareel chapter, Order of Eastern Star. It will be held Thursday, December 4, at 8 p.m. in the Jacksonville Masonic temple.

New Table Cover

The card-playing set will go for a new foam rubber table cover. It has a suede-finish playing surface cushioned with a thin backing of foam to protect table tops. The cover is non-slip, wiper clean with a moistened soft brush, and rolls up for compact storage. Available in green, dubonnet, russet, red, and gray.

For a hearty supper dish, serve pork chops this way. Brown lightly floured chops quickly in a hot skillet, add richly flavored apricot whole fruit nectar and simmer until the chops are tender and the gravy rich and golden.

Scottish Body Plans Ceremony

Fred A. Purdin and cast will present the 30th degree of Scottish Rite Freemasonry on Monday, December 1, at 8 p.m. in the Masonic Temple, for the benefit of the fall class of candidates and Scottish Rite masons. This is the terminal degree for the Council of Kadosh.

Club Announces Coming Events

December master point play of the Medford Duplicate Bridge club will be held Tuesday, December 2. On December 16 the club will hold a Christmas party with a dinner preceding the games. Club members are to make reservations with the director.

Top scores in the November 25 regular session of play in the east-west position were held by Mrs. Marion Keim and Mrs. Richard Milestone, first, 128½; Mrs. Robert Elliott and Berg Marten, second, 121; Mrs. Fred Purdin and John Russell, third, 120½; and Mrs. George Rode and Mrs. Al Gilhousen, fourth, 113.

In the north-south position the four high scores went to Roy Pruitt and Howard Boyd,

Wine Storage

An authority on the subject assures us that storing wines at home is no problem; and it is so convenient to have a few bottles on hand for cooking and beverage use. Simply keep bottles in a cool, dry place; lay corked bottles on their sides so corks will stay tight and moist, sealing out the air. Table wines are somewhat perishable and once opened and exposed to air should be used within a few days. Appetizer and dessert wines keep indefinitely after being opened. Serve red table wines at room temperature; white wines chilled.

first, 123½; Mrs. Leland Clark and Mrs. A. W. Lingaas, second, 120½; William Knope and William Burnett, third, 115; and Mrs. Berg Marten and Leland Clark, fourth, 112.
