Blue Star Group Hears Reports

Medford Blue Star Mothers were entertained recently by Mrs. Reimer Peterson at her home on Beatty street. Mrs. Edward Siltan, 324 Vancouver street, was welcomed as a prospective member.
Hospital chairman, Mrs. Fred Middlebush, reported that she, with Mrs. William Naylor, Mrs. Ethel Severson and Mrs. F. B. Gleaves, conducted the monthly birthday party for the wheel chair patients at the Camp White domiciliary on Friday.
Plans were made to help with donations for the annual Christmas party for the men at Camp White.
Several members reported they had greatly enjoyed their recent tour through the various departments in the hospital and were well impressed with the modern and complete facilities and equipment in the medical, dental and physical therapy departments.
Mrs. Helen Watson and Mrs. Middlebush reported on attending the orientation classes held recently in the Elks club room on Central avenue. Twenty-two department heads explained the functions of their particular departments.
Mrs. James Cech reported on a recent visit she made in Roseburg at the Veteran's hospital and with the Roseburg Blue Star mothers. Plans were discussed for the next party for the wheel chair members at the domiciliary held Friday.
The annual Christmas party for the club will be held at the home of Mrs. William Naylor on New Ray road in Central Point.
President George Washington signed the bill to establish the Navy in 1794.

Every Sadie Hawkins' day event includes at least one man costumed as Marring Sam, and Glenn Matthews attended a party at the Richard Schuchard home last week end as that famous Al Capp character. ## Votes Confirm Lead Of Yukon Democrats

Anchorage, Alaska — (UPI)—Alaska's new state legislature continued to shape up as a firm Democratic body yesterday as returns from Tuesday's elections filtered in from outlying areas.
In only one district out of the 24 political subdivisions was a Republican elected to the state senate. Republicans were elected to the house of representatives from four districts.
Two of the House seats still were not settled pending the count of absentee ballots.
Cloudy jelly is caused by improperly straining the juice, allowing the mixture to stand before pouring it into glasses, or using fruit which is too green.

Reporter Plays Cinderella With Millions in Diamonds

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
New York — (UPI) — One way to play Cinderella is to visit Harry Winston's.
Here, a girl without a dime toward a diamond is free to dream, to admire, even to try on some of the world's most fabulous jewels. I spent a morning doing same, just to see what all was behind those doors at the House of Winston, which the other day gave the million dollar Hope diamond to the Smithsonian Institution.
It takes nerve, unless you're rich, to walk through the heavy, iron grill doors of the sedate gray stone house, once the home of a countess, now identified only by a small bronze plaque on the front.
But nobody stopped me. No armed guards crowded around to check my credentials, one press card or my checkbook. I might have been a customer!
The whole atmosphere was so casual, I asked Don Carnevale, a vice president, if thievery of some of that ice wasn't a simple thing. Who would miss a few small stones from a collection insured at well above 25 million dollars?
Complicated Alarm System
"We'll just X-ray you as you leave," Carnevale laughed.
I found later that although there was little obvious security, the house has a complicated communications and alarm system which can call the cops, both city and private, in a hurry. And every gem, whether worth $50 or $500,000, is carefully photographed and inventoried.
Carnevale gave me the grand tour of all six floors to show that the Winston business is, if I may say so, many-faceted. Here, some 250 employees design and finish jewels for both the wholesale and retail trade — for customers ranging from Egypt's exiled King Farouk who bought the Star of the East diamond — 94.8 carats — to a mail order house which buys thousands of one-half and one-fourth carat engagement rings in a single order.
Bernard De Haan, chief of the cutting department and the fourth generation of his family in the jewelry business, said that a lot of carats — sometimes 60 per cent of the original stone — are lost in the cutting. He swiped his hand across a counter — "once a diamond, now a carbon smudge," he said.
Farouk Still Owes
Carnevale pointed to an assembly counter littered with sketches and small white packets of gems and casually commented, "about five million dollars there."
I began to feel equally casual about all that glitter until Winston took me into his second floor office, with its period furniture and crystal chandeliers, and said: "There are still plenty left, even with the Hope gone."
"Farouk still owes me for the Star of the East and some other stones . . . about $1,150,000 all told. The Star of the East has not been found," said the jeweler who also once owned the Jonker. The Jonker, one of the six largest diamonds ever found, weighed 726 carats before it was cut into 12 stones and Winston said "number eight, the Marquise, just came back to me the other day."
Pie filling mixes save only about four minutes in preparation time, but cost about 75 per cent more than the individual ingredients.

How To Prepare Skunk Told In New Cook Book

New York — (UPI) — A hunter who mistakenly bags a skunk this season is in luck.
If he has the courage to remove the scent glands and dress it, Martin Rywell's "Wild Game Cook Book" (Pioneer Press) tells how to cook the animal.
"The meat is white, tender and flavorful," writes the author. It may be pot-roasted or broiled.
Not interested in skunk? Maybe you'd rather eat crow. This is described as "good eating" — if you like your meat dark, dry and slightly gamey.
Any not-so-wise owls which get in the way of a hunter may end up in fricassee or barbecue, provided the diner goes for gamey flavor.
Woodchuck is another dish which the gun expert recommended. If there are none around, you can wait for groundhog day in February when the little animal sticks his head out of his burrow to signal an early or late spring.
Rywell's slim paperback volume is a real bargain for serious game fanciers. It contains more than 350 recipes, ranging from simple broiling to roasting a la Brillat Savarin (recommended for pheasant).

Raymond R. Camp's "Game Cookery in America and Europe" (Coward McCann) also is a fine guide, and is in the increasingly popular tradition of cookbooks that are fun to read.
The author wrote the New York Times' "Wood, Field and Stream" column for 20 years, and has conducted a hunting and fishing program for a major broadcasting network (NBC) for three years.
Like Rywell, he includes recipes for both fowl and animals. Many were acquired from sportsmen.
Thrifty homemakers may go for Camp's own recipe for duck soup.
Quarter 3 duck carcasses and place in a large kettle with 1/2 cup diced tomatoes, 2 stalks celery, 3 diced medium onions, 1 diced large carrot, 1/4 teaspoon tarragon, 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel, 1 minced clove garlic, 1/2 cup chopped cabbage, 2 sprigs parsley, 1 can chicken consommé, 2 quarts water, and salt and pepper to taste.
Bring to boil, reduce to simmer, cover and simmer 45 minutes. Remove carcasses, carve off meat and set aside. Return carcasses to kettle, cover and simmer 1 1/2 hours. Strain through cheesecloth, skim off fat, and place stock in smaller kettle. Dice duck meat in 1/2-inch cubes, add to stock, bring to a boil and serve.

a little girl's World
All blue skies, all serene days . . . and always within easy reach . . . everything to make her happy. Little girls expect it to be so. And, if Daddy had his way, it would be like this, always. But even the most ideal childhood—planned so carefully by the best of parents—cannot last forever.
The most we can hope to do is help the youngsters grow up strong . . . willing to assume responsibility . . . able to carry burdens with grace and dignity . . . finding meaning in their own particular lives.
But while they are still children there is this that we can do. We can show them how much we depend on weekly worship, by taking them with us, to our church or synagogue.
