As You Were Saying...

Continental Courtesy. While traveling in Holland several years ago, we stopped at a restaurant near Amsterdam. A young Dutch couple was leaving as we entered and we asked if the food was good.

The man said, "No, we were disappointed in it. But if you're traveling north, we can show you an excellent place."

He led us to a small town about 15 miles down the road from Amsterdam and pointed out a hotel, telling us it was famed for its food.

Upon thanking them, we discovered they had driven 15 miles out of their way just to show us a good place to eat. With gasoline 38 cents a gallon in Holland, it was an unusual gesture of good will to American tourists.—Mrs. Jack S. Hart, McAllen, Tex.

Child Psychologist. I often think that books on how to raise children should be written by children.

Recently, while waiting in line at an ice-cream stand, I noticed two boys, about 7 and 2. The older was holding tightly to his little brother, who was announcing emphatically to all the world, "I want vanilla. I want vanilla."

Unfortunately the vanilla machine had broken down and, thinking how my own 2-year-old would react to a crisis like that, I wondered how the older boy would handle the situation. Without flinching, he ordered two strawberry cones and handed one to his little brother.

"Here you are," he said cheerfully, "pink vanilla!"—Mrs. Ralph Crossan, Quincy, Ill.

More Than Lip Service. One day years ago, when farm animals were a vital part of a farmer's assets, my father heard a group of men expressing sympathy for a farmer whose mule had died. This was considered a serious loss for any family. One of the group reached in his pocket and brought out his wallet. He said, "I'm sorry $5. How much are you sorry?"—F.V.B., Elberton, Ga.

Drop in Any Time! Back-yard swimming pools are becoming quite popular, but there's a great difference among some of the people who own them.

Recently, we drove past a particularly beautiful home, where a pool was being completed, but in front this forbidding notice had been prominently posted: "No Lookers. Private Property. Keep Moving."

In striking contrast was the notice at another under-construction pool at a more modest home. Neighbors told us that the owners had been saving for years to build it, and when it was nearly completed they announced on a sign before their house:

We're all so very happy, folks!
Though it isn't a girl or boy,
You're all invited to inspect
Our latest pride and joy!

—Ann Bogdany, Florence, N. J.
