

Ditch Collapses; Workman Succumbs

Vancouver, B.C. (UPI) — A Vancouver workman died in a cave-in Tuesday while firemen fed him oxygen and clamped slimy mud away from his crushed body.

Four other workmen were saved by rescue operations which started immediately following the collapse of a 12-foot sewer ditch which was part of a swimming pool project in South Vancouver. The other four workmen were rushed to Vancouver General Hospital. None was believed seriously injured.

Firemen risked their own lives for two hours in a desperate bid to save the life of Veikko Karanka despite the fact that 30 minutes before Karanka's body was recovered a doctor said there was little chance of his surviving.

Rescue workers said Karanka's chest was apparently crushed by the sheer weight of the mud.

New York (UPI) — "The Defiant One" has been selected by New York film critics as the best movie of 1958.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice. It merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. R. S. — My son is 29 and is considering marriage to a girl he has known for the past year. You might think that at his age he should be sufficiently mature to choose a wife, but frankly, I'm afraid he isn't.

Roy is interested in a girl who openly states that she doesn't care for homemaking or child rearing. She says she wants to put her children in a nursery school as early in life as possible and go on with her career. She says she likes children, but would go crazy if she were "shut up in a house with them all day."

My husband and I feel that Roy would be making a big mistake to marry such a girl. He's sure that she'll change after marriage, but she's determined to me like a very determined type. This is the third girl he has been serious about — and they've all been odd in some way.

Roy S.— Things have really gone too far when my parents try to veto my choice of a wife at this late age. This has happened before and I feel that I might have been happily married for years if they hadn't interfered.

The first girl I was interested in was a political radical, but I was beginning to convert her to conservatism when my folks stepped in and messed things up. The second girl was kind of unconventional in her manners and style of dress, but she might have changed also — if given a chance.

This latest girl has some ing an up-and-tem career. He has an unconventional dress- ing or a political radical — and that is that the apparent- ly doesn't care for any of these types.

Men have made successful marriages to all three types, but only when their tastes ran in those directions. Roy seems to pick girls with characteristics he doesn't like and then proceeds to map a campaign to change them.

Most mature individuals recognize that the attempt to change others is a pretty futile proposition. What is not recognized is that persons who want to change others have some fairly severe problems and conflict of their own. Usually, such an individual is trying to achieve a sense of power or wants to triumph over some inner difficulties. He feels inadequate in the face of his own need for change and projects some of his own supposed failings on his would-be victim.

The fact that Roy goes out of his way to find girls who are unacceptable to his parents and then seems dissatisfied with his own choice, indicates that he feels he falls short of his parents' ideals for him. He shares these ideals and, at the same time, wants to rebel against them and assert his own individuality. But he won't assert his individuality by either accepting or rebelling against these standards unless he finds some deep confidence in his own personality.

When Roy feels ready to love a woman exactly as she arrived at the inner strength to accept himself as he is. Before that time, he is not mature enough to marry, nor matter what his numerical age.

MYOSITIS

Someone wants to know what myositis is and if there is any cure for it. Myo, in Greek, means a muscle and itis is a gentling ending, meaning "of the." Originally the word disease preceded the "of the," but somewhere along the way it got lost or left off. Today "itis" has come to mean "disease." There are many reasons why a muscle can get sore. For instance, I was recently talking to a woman who came in, much distressed because her right breast was hurting her so much. It had been hurting her for about four days, and she was sure she must have cancer.

As I pointed out to her, there was nothing wrong in the breast; most of the soreness was in her ribs and in the muscles on the front of the chest that help move the right upper arm. Because I couldn't convince her, I sent her to one of the country's leading experts on cancer of the breast who promptly agreed with me that there was nothing wrong in her breast. He agreed with me that most of her soreness was in her chest wall.

What had happened? It was all very simple; the lady had read in some beauty magazine that if, each morning, a woman will brush her hair vigorously 100 times, the hair will soon become lustrous and beautiful. She started the brushing, but because she never takes any exercise, the muscles of her right "shoulder girdle" promptly got very sore. Fortunately, the day after I saw her, the soreness all went away, and she was all right again.

Cause Found

A few weeks previously I had seen another woman of this type who was also sure she had a cancer of her right breast. When I couldn't find anything in it, and when I noticed that her soreness was in her ribs and her chest muscles, I asked her what she had been doing. Then she admitted that she had just changed all the paper on the shelves in her butler's pantry.

Some people are much more likely to get sore muscles and tendons and tissues than others are because they have a life-long tendency to what is called fibrositis, which is a sort of younger brother of arthritis. I've had fibrositis all my life. I discovered it when I was in high school. I found I couldn't play football because every severe bump on a muscle caused it to become very sore for a week or 10 days.

When Spring comes and tennis players go out into the courts again some of them get what they call a Charley horse, which is a decided soreness of one of the muscles in the legs. Sometimes muscles will be sore when a person has a cold, and sometimes they get sore without any discernible cause. A few people get soreness of their muscles as arthritics do, when the weather changes or when a storm is approaching from a distance.

Good treatment is the taking of aspirin, perhaps some massage or diathermy or getting into a tub of hot water. Usually, in a few days, the soreness is gone. There are a few severe types of myositis, but they are so rare I will not discuss them here.
