'Dead' Woman Said Satisfactory

San Francisco - A housewife who had been given up for dead was in "fairly satisfactory" condition today at San Francisco General hospital.

Mrs. Michelle Shaw, 53, owed her life to two sympathetic police officers who doctor to view her body after a doctor had pronounced her dead.

Her husband, Lawrence, told Officers Dennis O'Connell and Joseph Lordan that they had had an argument on New Year's Eve. He stamped out of their apartment just after midnight.

Shaw said she returned an hour later to find his wife unconscious, with evidence she had swallowed a lot of pills, apparently barbiturates. Mrs. Shaw was taken to a hospital, where a doctor tried for 15 minutes to revive her.

With her pulse, blood pressure and heart seemingly stopped, he pronounced her dead.

Some time later, Officers O'Connell and Lordan arrived at the hospital to investigate the case. After interviewing the weeping Shaw, the officers asked to view the body.

In the company of a nurse and a physician, they pulled back the sheet. In their report they wrote:

"We noticed her jaw twitching, as if she were trying to breathe."

The doctor renewed his efforts to revive Mrs. Shaw. This time he succeeded. Mrs. Shaw regained consciousness and was kept at the hospital for further treatment.

Airlines Cancel Flights to Havana

Miami, Fla. - Pan American World Airways and Delta and National Airlines cancelled all scheduled flights to Havana today for the second straight day.

However, Pan American planned to send two special planes to the Cuban capital this afternoon to airlift Americans out at the request of the U.S. Embassy there.

Pan American and National flights normally connect with the American mainland here. Delta flights land at New Orleans.

All three lines said flights to the Cuban capital would resume when word was received that the Havana airport had been reopened to commercial traffic.

One of 20 Children Have Hearing Loss

Hearing defects show up in about one out of every 20 Jackson county school children, according to Dr. A. Erin Merkel, Jackson county public health officer.

This, he said, is about average for the state. About three or four out of 100 children are detected with hearing defects, he said. According to state statistics less than 100 children in Oregon require special education or rehabilitation due to hearing losses, reported Dr. Harold M. Erickson, state health officer.

Approximately one out of 20 children found with hearing defects will have a permanent hearing loss, Dr. Merkel said. Early detection and prompt treatment reduces the number needing special education or rehabilitation, he explained.

With her pulse, blood pressure and heart seemingly stopped, he pronounced her dead.

Some time later, Officers O'Connell and Lordan arrived at the hospital to investigate the case. After interviewing the weeping Shaw, the officers asked to view the body.

In the company of a nurse and a physician, they pulled back the sheet. In their report they wrote:

Many of those found with hearing losses have enlarged tonsils, adenoids or acute colds, the county public health officer said. Also, hearing testing equipment may show hearing losses above the voice range. This, Dr. Merkel said, is not a serious defect. The voice range is from 320 to 12,000 megacycles.

One of the main contributions to serious hearing loss is diseased tonsils or adenoids. Chronic infection from these organs often spreads back into the middle ear resulting in perforated eardrums and running ears. If detected early enough the more serious chronic condition can be prevented, the public health officer said. Other hearing defects may be due to nerve type of loss and little can be done for those, Dr. Merkel added.

State figures show that during the last school year 8,586 school children failed screening tests conducted by the state health department's audiometrists among pre-school elementary and high school age groups throughout the state. A total of 121,642 children were given tests, the state health officer said.

Dr. Erickson said experience has shown that about three-fourths of the children failing the tests will be restored to normal after treatment, and about one-fourth will suffer some permanent mild hearing loss.

The state health board audiometric tests are now given periodically in all elementary schools through the cooperation of local public health and school officials, Dr. Erickson said.

In Jackson county and throughout the state approximately one-third of the first graders are examined every year. A recheck on defects is given and more children examined the next year. By the third year all of the first graders have been checked, the county public health officer said.

Dr. Merkel said in this county those found with hearing defects are referred to their family doctor or private physician. If they can't afford to pay the doctor's fee the county public health officer examines them and gives treatment.

Feast of Lights Planned Sunday

The traditional Epiphany pageant, "Feast of Lights" will be presented at St. Mark's Episcopal church Sunday at 7:30 p.m. The production will be directed by Mrs. Scott Hamilton assisted by Jerome A. McDougall, Scott Hamilton and the church school staff, with the children of the school making up the cast.

An accompanying music will be provided by St. Mark's Chorists, directed by Mrs. Ann Wirkkula with Miss Lou Elsa Voegly at the organ. The pageant will relate in symbolism the prophecies which foretold the coming of the Messiah of God, and will go on to unfold the story of the Nativity, and the visit of the Magi, concluding with the spread of the gospel and the Light of the World.

Candles lighted from the altar will be distributed to worshippers as they leave the church, symbolic of the obligation of the Christians to spread the "light" to the ends of the earth.

This service is open to all who care to attend.

Mediators Arrange 'Summit' Meeting

Washington - Federal mediators arranged a "summit" conference here today between the presidents of American Airlines and the striking pilots' union in a new effort to end the 14-day old walkout.

Both C. R. Smith, company president, and Clarence N. Sayen, head of the Air Line Pilots association, agreed to resume negotiations at National Mediation Board headquarters.

Board Chairman Leverett Edwards, announcing the meeting, said Smith and Sayen would join with the three-member board this afternoon to try and work out an agreement.

"We are going to try our best to settle the dispute and we'll work all week end if we have to," Edwards said.
