

Aluminum Molds May Be Successor to Tin Cans

By JEANNE LESEM
United Press Correspondent
New York—We'll still be eating canned foods when the can opener has joined the dodo in oblivion.

Foods, now packed in standard tin-plate cans, 50 years hence may be sold in aluminum molds that open with easy-tearing strips.

This possibility was seen by packaging expert Stephen M. Barker in a speech at the eighth annual United Fruit Company Food Forum here.

Barker, market development manager for the Continental Can company, pointed out that aluminum permits can shapes that are impractical in tin-plate and is becoming cheap enough for specialty uses.

Fancy molded dishes, such as chicken in special, could be packed in aluminum, ready to open and invert on serving platters.

An aluminum can mold could double as a casserole.

Early American Style Favorite At Home Show

By MARUERITE DAVIS
United Press International
Chicago—The annual mid-winter International Home Furnishings show got underway today with displays for all tastes, but with Early American the obvious style favorite.

Manufacturers who never before handled the style have added Early American groupings, or designed modern furniture with a feeling of the colonial days—a tester bed, peg detailing, a trestle table, and plank effects.

The theme is carried out in lamps and decorative accessories. There are John and Priscilla Alden wall plaques, a clock topped with an American eagle, oil lamps reproduced on a modern pole lamp and Williamsburg reproductions in fireplace pieces.

An Oriental influence is seen in some lines, primarily in lacquered table tops, delicate flower tracings and grass cloth on sliding panels.

Eye-pleasing patterns are fashionable. A laminated plastic called micarta, multi-colored in swirling abstract designs, is used on chests and tables for interesting accent pieces, and wallpaper patterns are applied to the interiors of chests and cabinets for another means of decoration.

Handsome woods are prominent. Mahogany is enjoying a new popularity, competing with walnut and cherry in suits of a single wood. There also are combinations. Walnut is used with rosewood or pecan, teak with rosewood, mahogany or oak, usually with clear finishes which show the grain of the wood.

Tall lamps, ranging from 40 to 50 inches high, are shown in traditional and Oriental designs. Manufacturers report white outcassoles all colors in popularity.

Manufactured fabrics are widely used for carpeting and draperies. A new fiber glass yarn is displayed for window curtains, and a newly developed nylon filament provides carpeting which is said to be shed-proof and fuzz-proof. New designs are shown for matching fabrics and wall-papers.

Neutral colors are the most popular—off-white, pewter and shades of brown are used with sharp accent colors. A crimson rattan Mandarin chair, black and red lacquer table tops, bottle green for dining room chairs, and a traditional upholstered chair in robin's egg blue are examples of this.

Plastic Pouches

Frozen prepared vegetables with their own dressing or sauce in plastic pouches for heating in boiling water. They will include asparagus in Hollandaise-style sauce, chopped broccoli au gratin, Delmonico potatoes and baby lima beans in cheese sauce.

Corn flake crumbs to use for breading, coffee cake topping or pie shells.

Special formula ice cream, with about the same calorie count as regular ice cream, but sugar-free for special diets.

Frozen filet regale (ready-to-cook cod or haddock, topped with lemon butter, parsley and paprika), frozen haddock in white wine sauce, frozen sliced beef with brown gravy, frozen sliced turkey with gravy and dressing, and frozen macaroni and cheese casseroles, all in 2-serving packages.

Cocoa-flavored corn cereal, with the taste and texture of macaroni, but not as sweet.

Granulated sugar substitute that can be sprinkled like sugar.

New Sauces

Liquid barbecue sauce, dry barbecue sauce mix and ready-to-serve dips in blue cheese, onion soup and dill pickle flavors.

Canned tuna frankfurters and almond macaroni in plastic tubes.

Chicken a la king, chicken with sweet potatoes and chicken with rice, in the baby food line.

Potato nuggets—dehydrated raw potatoes to use in hash browned potatoes, salads and casseroles and minced green onion.

Canned minted pineapple, peach-grapefruit and pineapple-orange canned beverages.

And non-carbonated natural fruit drinks in pineapple-grapefruit and pineapple-lime combinations.

Gardner Discusses Proposed Legislation for Labeling Shoes

Wilbur Gardner, Medford's crusading cobbler who believes that calling a spade a spade should apply to shoddy shoes, admitted yesterday he may be "kicking a big guy in the shins."

He said he has received a letter from Rep. Charles O. Porter (D-Ore.) informing him that a bill to require labeling of shoes is to be filed on Capitol Hill tomorrow.

Such labeling, which would inform customers of what materials shoes are made, has been sought by Gardner during an intense two-year campaign.

But now that he has a foot in the door of Congress, Gardner may find a strong lobby group throwing leather from the other corner.

"The National Shoe Manufacturers association boys were in today," Porter wrote in a footnote to his Dec. 30 letter. "They don't see any need for this legislation at all."

"I'm kicking a big guy in the shins," Gardner admitted. He told the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce round-table yesterday he considers labeling necessary because of "the trend of manufacturers to insert paper fibre and other cheap imitations into shoes."

He said these materials result in premature wearing-out thus causing additional expense and in some cases physical damage to feet.

"Primarily," he explained, "it is directed at schoolchildren, teen-agers and women who buy shoes primarily for style." He said shoe manufacturers were leery of using such materials in men's shoes, since men seek long-wearing footwear more than their wives or offspring.

"You were right," Porter wrote in his letter, "in saying there is a lot of interest in the shoe labeling bill. I have had many telephone calls and other indications of interest."

"It is all set to be dropped in the hopper, which is the way we file bills, on the first day of the 86th Congress, that is, January 7, 1959."

"The next stage will be to ask the chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee, my friend, Oren Harris (D-Ark.), to request reports from the various interested departments of government and once we have those reports, to press for a hearing."

May Visit Factory "It is my plan to visit one or two shoe factories as soon as I can to understand better what is involved in the making and the labeling of shoes."

Gardner said last month that Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.), has agreed to sponsor the bill in the Senate, and that both Porter and Neuberger have been seeking co-sponsors.

Asked if he planned to attend the Congressional hearings, Gardner said he has received "no direct reports" as to whether he will be called.

But, he added, "if they want me, I'll sell my bicycle and go."

Gardner emphasized that he is not out to stop the use of cheap synthetic materials in shoes—he simply believes people have the right to know what they're buying.

Mentions Legislation He mentioned for labeling legislation as an example of laws already in effect.

He said his sights are on the shoe manufacturers, not shoe retailers.

"I have never directed my attack against shoe retailers," he said. "In fact, I feel sorry for them."

"I have felt retail shoe stores should have done what I am doing long ago to protect themselves from the inroads of these cheap materials."

Gardner operates a shoe repair shop at 612 East Main st. A large sign in the window reads, "National Headquarters for Labeling Shoes."
