City Employees To Get Municipal Training Class

Medford's city hall is slated for double-duty as a little red schoolhouse next week as 93 municipal employees embark on a training course entitled "Supervisory Methods in Municipal Administration."

City Manager Robert A. Duff said today he is pleased with the size of the enrollment. He said there are some 140 city employees all told.

The course, offered as part of a continuing in-service training program, covers the various supervisory functions encountered in municipal government.

"It is designed," according to Gilbert Gutjahr, city administrative assistant and course coordinator, "to serve as a simple and effective way for employees to improve their knowledge of supervisory methods and to increase their skill in coping with supervisory problems."

The course is prepared by the Institute for Training in Municipal Administration, a branch of the International City Managers' association. It is the latest in a series of 10 such courses.

Nine groups, of about 10 employees each, will meet for two hours one evening a week for a period of 16 weeks. The groups will first meet next week and the week following.

Active Trading Is Noted on Markets

New York —UPI—The stock market continued its rise today on the most active trading since Nov. 6.

Industrials just about got to a level that brought back all the Wednesday loss and left the average at a record high. Rails set a new high since Aug. 20, 1956, utilities since June 13, 1950, and the 65 stocks in the three averages, a record high.

New demand developed for U. S. Steel late in the day and it led the market higher.

The street took President Eisenhower's message in stride with the comment that it contained nothing that had not been expected.

Investment money appeared in plentiful supply and the demand found stocks difficult to buy except at substantial price increases. This was particularly noticeable in the high priced issues where International Business Machines at one time was up 13 points.
