

TABLE ROCK Officers For Year Named

R. E. NEALON
Table Rock - At last Sunday's session of the local Sunday school, officers were elected to guide its course during the coming year. New superintendent is Mrs. Ray Doran; assistant superintendent, Mrs. R. E. Nealon; secretary, Mrs. Alan Fleischer; assistant secretary, Mrs. Don Wheeler and treasurer, Mrs. Bert Pierce.

Teachers appointed are, Bible class, Bert Pierce, Juniors, Mrs. Norman Matteson, Primary, Mrs. John Dickey. Young people's teacher is not appointed yet.

Bert Pierce, superintendent for the past three years, was given a vote of appreciation by the members.

The Rev. Alan Hill and family of Central Point were present and Hill stated that the new American S.S. Union Missionary, the Rev. G. Shinn for this district, would arrive here sometime in January.

The Central Point Camp of the RNA held their January meeting Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. R. E. Nealon.

Bob Sage spent part of his holiday vacation cultivating his two acre grove of Christmas trees and discovered that the bunny rabbits had bitten off about half of the young firs. He can't figure out why, as they were not eaten, just bitten off.

Bob said, he saw a big fat jack rabbit near his trees sometime ago and thought some of shooting him, but he looked so pretty and innocent, decided not to.

We would hate to be in Bre'r rabbit's shoes if Bob should meet him now, and have his gun along.

Mrs. Hobart Moore, a surgery patient in the Sacred Heart hospital, is reported to be getting along nicely and will be home in a few days.

Gene Adams is now at home, having completed his six months training with the armed services at Ft. Ord.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelly Pleasants returned Monday evening from a motor trip to Arkansas, where they visited relatives and friends in the town of Manila. They were gone for nearly a month, much of the time being spent on the road where they encountered snow most of the return trip. They stopped off to visit relatives at San Jose, Calif., on the way home.

Recent visitors at the J. S. Richardson home were Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Gay of Medford, Miss Susan Sykes of San Jose, Calif., Mrs. Hazel Atkins, of Eagle Point and her cousin, Russel Colvin, of Okanogan, Wash., and Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Fleischer of Central Point, and Mrs. Fleischer's brother, Arthur Orr, of Washington, D.C.

The January meeting of the local Ladies club, will be held Wednesday, Jan. 14, at the home of Mrs. Vernon Gebhard, with Mrs. Robert Dunn assisting.

A letter from Miss Gail Bishop in Kansas City, Kan., informs us that they have plenty of snow and the thermometers have been registering from zero to seven above for the last few days.

Some 16 young adults of the Bigham clan attended a taffy pull Saturday night given for them by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith at their home. Also, a birthday party was held at the Smith home Thursday night honoring Mrs. David Doran and attended by the immediate families.

Everett Brown, foreman for the local ditch company, has been busy the past week with a crew, replacing some leaky tile crossing the road at the Modoc corner. The heavy traffic was too much for the concrete which was replaced with steel pipe.

CEASE FIRING
Portsmouth, England - (UPI) - The Portchester Boy Scout troop was out looking for 400 cannon balls today. Scoutmaster Anthony Cobham said the troop agreed to fill an export order to make a Bermuda fort look realistic. He said the boys were confident of finding the cannon balls in the mud of a Portsmouth Harbor backwater once used as a navy firing range.

Norblad Could Become Candidate For Higher Office

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

Washington - Rep. Walter Norblad, Oregon's only Republican in Congress, does not discount himself as a possible candidate for higher office in one of the next two elections when he thinks the GOP will show renewed strength in the state.

At the same time, Congressman Norblad looks to Gov. Mark Hatfield as the key man in the Republican party hopes for countering the widespread advances of the Democrats in Oregon in recent elections.

"If anybody can (steer the Republicans to a comeback), Mark's the guy who can do it," observed Norblad. Both of Oregon's Senate seats, now held by Democrats Richard L. Neuberger and Wayne Morse, will be up for grabs in the next two elections. Neuberger's term is up next year, Morse's in 1962.

Like many others, Norblad is wondering whether Neuberger will run for reelection, for the senator himself has cast some doubt on the matter by his frequent references to his preference for living in Oregon and returning to the comparatively free and easy life of a free lance writer.

May Run for Senate
If Neuberger should bow out, Norblad might saddle up his long tethered senatorial ambitions and make a run for it. If Neuberger seeks another term, Norblad will undoubtedly stay put and run for another term as congressman from the First district, which stretches from Salem to Astoria and is still predominantly Republican in voter registration.

Norblad is feeling no pain as a result of his handsome victory over the challenge last November of Democratic Attorney General Robert Y. Thornton. He notes that he defeated Thornton by some 18,000 votes, and yet the Republicans in his district enjoy a margin of only about 10,000 over the Democrats, and that Thornton spent a good deal more money on advertising in behalf of his candidacy than did Norblad.

Moreover, to reach the general election, Norblad had to defeat Phil Hitchcock in last spring's primary. The outcome wasn't even close. So, for the first time in his 12-year political career, Norblad has faced and walloped two major contenders, one from each party.

Norblad doubts that Hatfield will run for Neuberger's Senate seat next year, only two years after being elected to a four-year gubernatorial term. But he allows as how Hatfield might go against Morse in 1962. He doesn't discount himself in the event that Hatfield should run for another term as governor that year.

Eyes Governor's Office
If Hatfield runs for the Senate in 1962, then the governorship will be wide open once more. The congressman, whose father was once governor, showed a desire to hold this high state office himself early in 1956 when he announced his intent to seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination. But when party leaders lined up behind Elmo Smith, Norblad withdrew and ran again for Congress. Smith then lost in the general election to Robert D. Holmes, Democrat.

As for the upcoming legislative work in Washington, Norblad hopes to get some funds to develop the Ft. Clatsop park which was authorized by the last Congress. He also wants to get money to start construction of the Yaquina Bay navigation project and to start Green Peter dam on the south Santiam river, a federally authorized power and flood control project which the administration had wanted to develop as a "partnership" dam in conjunction with "Pacific Power and Light Co.

Asked for his view of reports the administration will not favor starting any new projects this year, to hold the line on spending, Norblad said, "I think a complete policy of no new starts is not warranted. I think the complexity of this Congress is such that it will add funds to the budget to start new projects."

Enlistment of Business Seen Way To Win Economic War

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

New York - (UPI) - The best way to win the economic war against the Soviet is to enlist business which now is in the 4F status, says Donald K. David, chairman of the Committee for Economic Development.

David is in an economic war to a finish with Russia and that the goal is to determine whether our system or Communism is the superior one.

He bases his conclusion on a quotation from remarks by Nikita Khrushchev. "We declare war," said the Soviet leader. "We will win over the United States. The threat to the United States is not the ICBM, but in the field of peaceful production. We are relentless in this and will prove the superiority of our system."

So far, says David, we haven't convinced the Free World of the superiority of our system.

Recalls War Effort
"What is needed," he says, "is a means-a mechanism-by which business can enlist in the economic war."

"Although the war is being fought in areas of their special knowledge and experience, businessmen are in something of a 4F status. They pay taxes but are not directly involved in the fighting. I think they should be at the front. I even believe that more of them should be officers."

He recalls how we created the "arsenal of democracy" two decades ago through mobilizing our economic power for waging the more conventional type of war.

"We did it by government contract with private industry equipped and able to do the jobs that needed to be done."

"And when I think of the job that now most needs to be done in the underdeveloped countries, it seems to me that this technique is particularly appropriate."

He holds we must export skills as well as capital since most of the underdeveloped countries lack both business enterprises and business managers.

A New Partnership
Such operation, he notes, requires the building of a new partnership of business and government dedicated to promoting economic development abroad.

"This partnership," David says, "could be effected by having responsible government agencies contract with private companies and private management to plan, build, organize, operate, and train local people for operating business enterprises abroad. . . . The responsibility would extend all the way from assessing the soundness of the projected enterprise, organizing the company, securing its financing, building the plant, developing its market, and finally, recruiting and training local people to move in and carry the enterprise."

Business would not have to invest its own funds but arrangements could be made to let it acquire at least a minority interest in the enterprise. The U.S. government would have to develop the economic programs for the various nations, select the American firms, negotiate contracts and set and maintain standards of performance.

For its part the American firms would be given a reasonable fee.

Chinese Reds Said Freezing To Death

Taipei - (UPI) - More than 1,000 persons have frozen to death in Communist communes in North China, the Nationalist China Central News agency reported from Hong Kong today.

Quoting unidentified sources from Communist China, the dispatch said the Reds have imposed a complete news blackout in fear it may deepen the people's resentment against the commune system.

It said four out of ten farmers are still wearing their summer clothes in sub-zero weather.

Camel outsells every other cigarette for 10th straight year

Latest published cigarette sales figures* prove that Camel continues its 10-year leadership over every other cigarette - every filter, every king-size, every regular. The reason is clear: the costly Camel blend of choice quality Turkish and domestic tobaccos has never been equalled. No other cigarette can bring you the rich flavor, the easygoing mildness, the downright comfort of Camels. Today as always, the best tobacco makes the best smoke.
