Ride in Little Devil Jet Helicopter Found Not Like Sitting in Easy Chair

By WILLIAM TERRY Moffett NAS, Calif.—If you would like to be a human yo-yo, come along for a ride on a Little Devil jet helicopter.

The newest in "choppers" can shoot upward at 100 feet a second and perform a St. Vitus dance in the sky.

One moment you are on the ground nodding to the mechanic at takeoff. The next second you are peering down at his tiny figure on the runway.

Your stomach catches up several seconds later.

I boarded the "Djinn" (French for Little Devil) at the National Helicopter association of America Convention. The 17-foot, half-ton 81-mile-an-hour rotor craft isn't much bigger than a living room divan.

No Easy Chair Ride

But pilot Jack Crosthwait, a 26-year-old ex-Marine, didn't go for an easy chair ride. He wanted to show me how the bird really performed.

The mechanic who gave us the lift-off signal rapidly receded to doll-like size, as we zoomed straight up at 6,000 feet a minute.

Then Crosthwait made the Little Devil dance around the sky. From the ground we must have resembled a whirling dervish.

We bobbed and bounced until Crosthwait turned off the Problems of Plaza Area Are Discussed

Ashtland - Problems connected with revitalization of the Plaza area of Ashtland were discussed at a meeting of the Plaza Promoters this week.

The group expressed determination to make the Lithia park entrance and approaching streets more attractive to tourists and townpeople.

Eldon Scripser, chairman, pointed out that a new quarter-million-dollar Shakespearean Festival theater will be constructed, and said that surrounding buildings and scenic background could be improved.

Suggestions of project ranged from removal of obsolete buildings and erection of better directional signs, to moving all city offices into the city hall and erecting a tourist information house at the Plaza center.

Much of the discussion centered around the tendency of businesses and residences moving in a southerly direction.
