

Back Stairs: Welk Show Pleases Ike

By MERRIMAN SMITH
 UPI White House Reporter
 Ladies and gentlemen closely familiar with the reaction of President and Mrs. Eisenhower to professional entertainment say never have they seen the chief executive and his wife enjoy anything quite as much as Lawrence Welk.

The champagne music man who confounds the jazz hounds by his smashing success on television came to dinner at the White House this week. Welk, his orchestra and Alice Lon, the "Champagne Lady," entertained in the East Room after dinner.

Watch Welk Often
 Mrs. Eisenhower confided to Miss Lon that she and the President watch the Welk organization on television whenever possible—and Welk is on twice a week with his bubbling music beloved of those who think Benny Goodman is a golf pro.

The President enjoyed the East Room musicale so much that he stayed up quite later than usual to have a private 20-minute chat with the orchestra leader.

Lady reporters who covered the musicale were somewhat unprepared for the split-second timing of the way-haired maestro. One girl reporter, intent about her business, walked up with pad and pencil to ask Welk a question. Before a word could be exchanged, the band leader snatched the pad and pencil away from the lady, scrawled his autograph and handed it back to her with a great big smile.

Mrs. Jean Hart Plans Opening of Store Addition

To mark the completion of an addition to her store and extensive renovation, Mrs. Jean Hart has planned a grand opening and trunk showing of sports clothing for Monday, Feb. 2.

The store is located at 617 East Main st. in the expanding East side shopping area. Favors will be presented to those visiting the store Monday.

Here to manage the trunk showing of the Glen of Michigan sportswear will be Mrs. Emma Lyn Huber, sales representative of the firm. The showing will be from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Mrs. Hart has carried the Glen of Michigan line for several years and pointed out that it has proven popular with southern Oregon women.

Acquires Space
 The addition to the store, acquired by taking over space to the east formerly occupied by an insurance firm, is 14 by 40 feet. This area will house the sportswear stock and the corset and brassiere stock of Mrs. Idah Wood, who operates this department under a lease from Mrs. Hart.

Mrs. Wood has been associated with Mrs. Hart for the past three years.

New dressing rooms are also located in this part of the building.

The entire interior has been redecorated, using a cream color scheme accented with redwood trim. The redwood has also been used for the divider sections and new shelves. The heating and ventilating system of the store has been modernized.

Mrs. Hart states that all lines of coats, suits and dresses carried in the past are being continued, and that new lingerie and hosiery counters will permit additional stock in these departments.

Mrs. Hart has been in business in Medford for the past 13 years. She started with a personal shopping service, and then opened the clothing store at a location on South Grape st. Five years ago she moved to the East Main st. location now occupied by the store.

lag behind," Grenfell said.

Present law calls for all counties to enter into the assessment arrangement with the Commission by 1961 but Grenfell does not feel this is soon enough.

Only six counties have not signed agreements with the Commission.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. L. K.—I am so upset about my 20-year-old daughter Harriett I hardly know what to do.

Six months ago she broke an engagement to a very nice young man she had gone with for four years. She broke it just out of childish foolishness. She met a man of 30, who happened to be good-looking and a slick talker, and she fell for him head over heels. Within two months he got tired of her and now she's left high and dry—just as I told her she'd be.

The big problem now is that all her old friends—boys and girls—are disgusted with her and won't have anything to do with her. She's out of the swim. She wants to go away for a while and visit her aunt. I tell her there's no hiding place. She has to face the music.

Harriett K.—I don't know how I'm going to face the music if nobody even asks me out to face it. Even my best girl friend turned against me. My ex-fiance is very popular with our whole crowd. Everyone feels that I gave him a raw deal. We had gone steady since our high school days.

I realize that I made a bad mistake, but what am I supposed to do about it? Leonard wouldn't have me back even if I begged him. Anyway, I'm not sure I would want him again even if he asked me.

My mother doesn't want me to visit my aunt because she is a career woman who never married. Mother knows that I admire her for her success and she's afraid I'll get "foolish notions." I don't think I will. I just want to get away from it all for a while.

The Council—Both mother and daughter overlook some important factors in this situation. These factors may influence their outlook on the immediate future.

The most significant factor is that Harriett is not guilty of any serious crime and doesn't deserve to be treated like a culprit. She should not have to "face the music" or to "get away from it all." Her friends are dead wrong to boycott her. They can sympathize with her ex-fiance, but it is not up to them to pass sentence in this very personal matter. Eventually one or all of them will realize it.

Harriet and her mother seem to have accepted the verdict of the "crowd"—that she has done a terrible wrong in breaking the engagement. They fail to recognize that the wrong preceded this event. Harriet undoubtedly had quite a bit of uncertainty about her engagement to Leonard. If she weren't shaky in her feelings about him and her approaching marriage, she would never have allowed another man to enter the picture. It is quite likely that she used the second man as an easy and

New Course Offered For Social Workers At Southern Oregon

Ashland — Leading to a bachelor of science degree in general studies with a major in social science, a new course offering for social workers has been instituted at Southern Oregon college, according to Dr. Alva W. Graham, director of graduate studies.

Stressing the increasing demand for graduates in this area, Dr. Graham quoted James Pullman, Jackson county welfare administrator, as saying "The demand for qualified social workers is great and the number of professionally qualified applicants very small."

"This new course has been specifically designed to meet this need," Dr. Graham said. "It will enable students to enter directly into social work or take graduate work at such schools as the University of Washington or the University of California."

Rewarding Profession
 Social work can be a highly-rewarding profession," Graham continued, "not only from a psychological standpoint but in terms of salaries and prestige. Possessors of a BS degree are offered about $4,000 a year to begin with, and those who specialize in graduate work begin at salaries of five to six thousand dollars."

For the freshman and sophomore years, the recommended program is the same as for all general studies students. On the junior and senior levels sequences will be required in anthropology, sociology, philosophy, political science, and allied courses. Individual courses such as marriage and the family, human development, and adolescent psychology will also be required, and there will be opportunities for experience with social agencies under the direction of Dr. Frederick Trost, college coordinator and staff member.
