Steel, Auto Business Comes Into Sights of Trust Busters

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

New York – (UPI) – The Department of Justice in a way of speaking has declared war on big steel and big automobile companies.

Elmer Walzer

Chief trust buster Victor R. Hansen says his department is studying action against what he calls undue concentration in the steel and automobile business.

Actions to bust up big business could stir up a stock market decline, say the experts. Then again, they could be accepted in the usual Wall Street stride without much difficulty.

Suppose they should knock the stock market down? Would the little investors who have put their hard-earned savings into stocks that might be hit retaliate? Would they rise up as the housewives did 10 years ago when the Justice Department tried to break up Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.?

It is recalled how the housewives shouted against the Justice Department. That government agency couldn't take apart their big store that gave them low prices, they said in effect.

A. & P. in 1949 ran a series of advertisements telling its story. The company, along with the anti-trust division and Congressmen were flooded with letters of protests from housewives all over the nation.

Hundreds of farm organizations joined the protest. So did labor unions and business groups. Even some of A. & P.'s competitors took a hand at letter writing in favor of the company.

In fact, so many articulate voters shouted so loudly that the Justice Department was glad to drop the case like a hot potato. And A. & P. is still in business with its stock listed on the big board.

What could little stockholders do against the big Justice Department? They could shout but they lack leadership and they don't get the attention from government agencies that is given housewives, unions, and farmers. When these squeak, there's grease coming very quickly for the wheel.

However, here's a potential group that might be brought together under the proper leadership. There now are some 10 million stockholders throughout the nation. They are little and big–more little than big. They are in every city from coast to coast and every hamlet boasts a few.

These stockholders are high-class citizens, frugal, saving for the future and trying to protect their dollars. They could be whipped up into a powerful group for good, but so far attempts to organize them haven't amounted to much.

There are several individuals and some organizations that speak for certain groups of stockholders, but none represents all of them. They have no grange, they have no union, they have no chamber of commerce of their own. And for the most part the little stockholder isn't articulate. He takes a lot and says nothing.

Incidentally, Wall Street is divided on the ultimate results of Department of Justice forays into the realm of big business. It doesn't like the activities in Washington, but it isn't sure that in the end they'll have a real influence on the stock market.

The market in the past has weathered such storms. It got over the big trust busting of the early 1900s. It lived through many an anti-trust case and at times thrived as the hearings were building up millions of words.

One thing Wall Street is agreed upon is that if the Justice Department sought to single out say General Motors for a break-up, the operation would drag on for years and years.

Meantime, the climate doesn't seem to be very good for mergers of any kind. And if a company is big, the stockholder can safely bet it at least will get a mention in the Washington hearings.

Book Display Features Science of Language

On Sunday, Feb. 8, the Bell System Science Series will present on KBES-TV "The Alphabet Conspiracy," the story of the science of language. This is an hour-long program featuring Dr. Frank Baxter on a subject of universal interest.

For readers and viewers who wish to pursue the subject further, the Medford Public library has arranged a special browsing-bin display of books on words and their history and use.

Among the titles suggested are "Words: Tricks and Traditions," by J. A. Friend; "The Word," by E. S. Beardsley; "Mark My Words," by J. B. Opdycke; "Word Power Made Easy," by Norman Lewis; and "The Power of Words," and "The Tyranny of Words," by Stuart Chase.

One of the most interesting discussions of the history of language is to be found in a book intended for young readers, "Tree of Language," by Helene and Charlton Laird. This lively account of language from its simplest beginnings to the complexities of today should stimulate any reader's interest in words. "Heavens to Betsy and Other Curious Sayings," by C. E. Funk is full of fascinating information about colloquial expressions.

Other suggestions include F. Bodmer's "Loom of Language;" S. I. Hayakawa's "Language in Action;" "Usage and Abusage," by Eric Partridge; and "Grammar Without Tears," by H. S. Davies.

U.S. Fish Catch Drops Five Per Cent

Washington (Science Service)–The catch of fish and shellfish in the United States and Alaska during the first 11 months of 1958 dropped about five per cent below that of the same period of 1957, according to the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries here. Total landings were 186,000,000 pounds less than the year before.

The principal decline occurred in landings of menhaden, jack mackerel, Alaska herring, Pacific mackerel, anchovies, whiting and haddock. Despite the over-all yearly decline, some catches were higher than the previous year. Production was up for Pacific sardines, salmon, tuna, ocean perch and Marine herring.

MISSED AT LAST

Bitha, Israel – (UPI) – Mrs. Leah Shmuel told police her husband has been missing for five months. Asked why she didn't report his disappearance sooner, she explained: "I didn't miss him until now."

Amsement Firm Sues Bus Line

Portland –(UPI)– Owners and operators of the Oaks Park amusement center has sued Portland Traction Company for $1,175,000 over abandonment of interurban passenger service.

The complaint was filed in Circuit Court here.

It said that as a result of the abandonment of passenger service the Oaks Park lost "thousands of customers."

The firm cut passenger service on its interurban line last year, saying it was losing money.

The complaint, in five sections, demanded $975,000 for the United Amusement Company, owner of the Oaks, and another $200,000 for Robert E. Bollinger, president of the company and owner of the land over alleged depreciation of the property.

Much of the sum demanded consists of treble damages sought under the railroad section of Oregon law.

The Oaks Park center is located in southeast Portland.

Device Aids Study Of Re-Entry Problems

New York (Science Service)–A device to study problems associated with re-entry of missiles into the earth's atmosphere has been developed by Todd Shipyards Corporation here. The device, a trumpet-shaped nozzle, is precision contoured so that air flowing through it gradually changes in density in the same way that the earth's atmosphere changes in density with altitude.

In operation, a gun-launched missile model is fired at full re-entry velocity through the nozzle. During a few thousandths of a second, it undergoes the stresses, pressure coefficients and temperatures of actual entry. It will become a component of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Atmosphere Entry Simulator, located at NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif.

Bus Drivers Plan Protest 'Strike'

Portland –(UPI)– Rose City Transit company bus drivers are planning a one-minute work stoppage at noon Sunday as a Centennial promotion stunt. The bus drivers have billed what they call the shortest and friendliest transit strike in Portland's history as a "protest" against a company edict against beards.

The bus drivers will halt their vehicles and read a proclamation to riders proclaiming the union's stand for beards and the Centennial.
