

TODAY
In Oregon History
(A Centennial Feature)

FEBRUARY 12, 1870
Col. W. M. Chapman delivered an address today before members of the Oregon Labor Union gathered at Union Hill. The Colonel, as always was in stout form and talked for a matter of two hours or more. He urged opposition to the 15th amendment, opposed the use of Chinese labor and came out strongly for the exclusion of Chinese from the state and nation, and had his usual unpleasant things to say about banks, bankers and bondholders.

Forestry Future To Be Discussed

Corvallis — The past, present, and future of forestry in the northwest will be reviewed, appraised, and forecast Feb. 20 and 21 at the Oregon State college special Centennial Forestry conference.

Nineteen leaders in forestry and science from across the U.S. and Canada will speak at the two-day meeting, and some 500 foresters from throughout the northwest are expected to attend.

Each half-day session will be devoted to a different phase of "The Next 100 Years in Forestry," W. F. McCulloch, dean of forestry, noted.

The first morning session will briefly examine the history of forestry and outline future research needs; the second will stress what's ahead in forest genetics, pest and disease control; the third will preview future developments in utilization, including harvesting methods, chemical wood utilization, and wood engineering and construction; and the fourth will pinpoint the effects of increasing population pressure on forestry of tomorrow.

OSC forestry staff members are in charge of conference plans and arrangements. Dean Henry J. Vaux, school of forestry, University of California, will be conference leader.

Traveler to Talk At Moose Hall Here

Dr. George Hunt Williamson, anthropologist, traveler, and author, will speak in Medford Friday, Feb. 13, at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Medford Interplanetary Study Center.

The program will be held at the Moose hall, 11 Newtown st.

Dr. Williamson will speak on the unidentified flying object world report, expeditions into Peru, and underwater explorations of the coast of Italy. He will illustrate his talk with slides. Admission will be by donation.

Three Youths Being Held by County

Three runaway youths are being held by Jackson county authorities pending further disposition of their cases, according to sheriff's deputies. A 15-year-old youth is being held as a runaway from Cornelius, Ore. Another 15-year-old youth is being held as a runaway from McMinnville. A 17-year-old youth is being held as a runaway from the Vancouver boys academy.

Sheriff Joe Walsh said he apprehended the three youths while he was on his way to work Wednesday morning when the car in which they were travelling "just didn't look right."

Women may serve on juries in 44 of the states and in addition may serve in the District of Columbia.
