Police Use Billies to Club Umps

Caracas—UPI—Local police put an abrupt end to an international baseball incident Sunday night by using their billies on the umpires.

It all came about during the ninth inning of a game between Cuba and Venezuela, which settled the Caribbean Series championship.

Venezuelan fans began jeering Cuban pitchers who were warming up in the bullpen. The Cubans replied by throwing dirt toward the people in the stands.

Capt. Francisco Guerra, the commissioner of sports in Cuba who accompanied the team here, rushed to the bullpen where a throng of players and umpires had gathered because of the commotion. Guerra attacked a United Press International photographer when he attempted to take pictures.

When the melee threatened to get out of hand, the police used their billies on the umpires. That put a damper on the fray, which finally ended when another group of police officers joined the scene and ejected their brother police officers from the ball park.

Cuba won the game and the championship, 8-2.

Boost Lead

Stanford increased its 28-22 halftime lead in the second half behind the shooting of John Arrillaga and Paul Neumann.

Oregon attempted to fight back behind the excellent play of Jerry Anderson, but could not overcome the disadvantage.

East Germans Maintain Ski Meet Discriminates

Squaw Valley, Calif.—UPI—The old Army game of passing the buck was in full swing here today as a series of complication eliminated East Germans from competing in the North American ski championships opening here on Saturday.

The East Germans claim they are being discriminated against by the United States; the North American organizers claim the East Germans never sent in an application; and Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic committee is disgusted with the whole thing.

The series of events went something like this:

1.—East Germany charges that the United States government has violated an agreement to let all countries compete in this country.

(The U. S. has promised this for the 1960 Olympic Games) and that officials of the North American championships have refused their entry.

2.—The North American ski officials claim that they delayed the closing date three times, from Nov. 15 to Feb. 2, but failed to get an entry from East Germany.

3.—The State Department last week ruled out participation by the East German team because this country does not recognize East Germany. However, said the State Department, the athletes could compete as individuals if they desired.

4.—Brundage said: "I don't know who started this and I don't know who's organizing these trials at Squaw Valley, but it all may add up to further complications for the Olympics."

Giants Sell Lockman To Orioles

San Francisco—UPI—Cotton-topped Whitey Lockman, a solid member of the Giants for 14 years, now belongs to the Baltimore Orioles.

Lockman's contract was sold Sunday to the American league club as the transplanted Polo grounders severed another tie with the days of Coogan's Bluff.

"We're sure that Baltimore will benefit from him," said Giant secretary Eddie Brannick, who added that terms were not being disclosed.

Lee MacPhail, the Orioles' general manager, said that the 32-year-old North Carolinian should answer Baltimore's need for another first baseman "of proven major league ability to back up Bob Boyd."

Smart's 20 Paces Huskies Win Over Oregon State

Seattle—UPI—Doug Smart, Washington's all-purpose center, rewrote the Husky scorebook Saturday night as he led his teammates to their sixth straight victory with a 75-59 PCC win over Oregon State.

Smart, who was high for the game with 20 points, moved into second place in all-time career scoring in PCC play, and the highest in Washington history, ahead of former all-American Bob Houbregs.

Strong Defense

The Huskies spurred to a quick lead and were never headed as they employed a strong defensive game against the Beavers.

Earle Irvine, second high for the game with 16, paced the Huskies in the first half with his outside shooting. Smart, who gathered in 16 rebounds, led the way in the last half.

High for Oregon State, and the only Beaver in double figures, was Jim Woodland, with 14 points.

Scientists Record Strong Winds at High Altitudes

New York (Science Service)—Both U. S. and Russian scientists have recorded extraordinarily high winds in the atmosphere—the American Meteorological Society meeting was told here.

Charles L. Jordan of Florida State University said airborne balloons showed unusually strong winds of 255 miles per hour at 9,000 feet over Bermuda on March 28, 1955.

Adam Kochanski of the Air Force's Air Weather Service said Russian records for July, 1957, the first month of the International Geophysical Year, showed exceedingly strong westerly winds of about 120 miles an hour occasionally occurred at heights of some 18 miles above the earth's surface. Normally the winds at this level are easterly at about 25 miles an hour.

High Variations

Kochanski also reported that the Russians had found unexpectedly high variations in temperature at the 18-mile altitude, ranging from 136 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to only 16 degrees below. Such a large variation means extreme density changes at this height.

He said the Russian IGY records for one month contained 1,960 temperature observations and 325 wind observations for levels 18 miles and higher. Twice daily records made by instrument-carrying, high-flying balloons at 70 stations are available, he reported.

You Can Keep Time By The Flowers

Many flowers have an opening and closing time which is kept just as regularly as a place of business.

Back before the invention of watches and clocks, people who were observant ascertained the time of day by the closing or opening of certain blossoms. Over a period of time the old philosophers and students found that many common plants had a definite time when they went to bed, and when they opened shop for the day—rain or shine.

There are some blossoms that are true sun worshippers and follow the sun's path across the sky, by keeping their faces constantly facing it. Such a one is the sunflower. There are others which actually close up when the sun goes under a cloud, rapidly unfolding their petals again when the cloud passes.

Some are Foeled

Some, like the moonflower, which ordinarily blossoms only at night, are fooled by a cloudy day and open up and try to do business. Even this rise however, does not fool the morning glory. It remains closed even though the moonlight is very bright, and seldom is tricked into opening before five in the morning.

Peculiarly enough, five, or very shortly thereafter is the scheduled time for this twiner to open shop for the day. Twelve hours later, at 5 p. m., the morning glory has had enough, and it closes up.

The African marigold opens promptly at 7 a. m., and closes between 4 and 5 p. m., regardless of the temperature or whether the sun is shining or not.

The common field marigold has bankers' hours; it opens at 9 a. m., and by 3 p. m., has completed its day's work, and closes up until the following morning.

Some flowers are not so punctual about their opening, but stick pretty close to the line about their closing time.

The common nasturtium may be very careless regarding its opening but religiously shuts up shop at 6 p. m. It's Punctual.

The four-o'clock received its name because of its punctuality. It waits until 4 p. m. The night-blooming cereus is a little careless; as long as it gets its huge white blossoms open between 10 p. m. and 5 a. m., it seems perfectly happy about it. However, it is very careful to see that

Alger Hiss, Wife Said Separated

New York—UPI—Mr. and Mrs. Alger Hiss were reported to day to have separated several weeks ago after 29 years of marriage.

Neither Hiss nor his wife, Priscilla, who stood by him through his long trials and eventual imprisonment for perjury, would comment on the report.

Friends said, however, that Hiss had moved out of their Greenwich Village apartment several weeks ago.

The couple has one son, Anthony, 17, a student in a Vermont preparatory school. Hiss was released from prison in 1954 after serving four years and eight months.

CORDIAL TASK

Gillingham, England—UPI—The Rev. J. R. John said today he will take a package of sandwiches and a flask of cordial to church with him on Holy Saturday. He said the feast would nourish him between the eight wedding services scheduled that day.

Anchorage has a population of 28,500—almost three times more than any other Alaskan city.
