

Professional Mouse-Proofing Said Best Way To Check Home

By United Press International
This is a good time to begin planning how to de-mouse your house.

Many of us have been dismayed into believing mice are humorous, harmless little creatures concerned only with kidie clubs, talking ducks and goofy dogs.

But the hard cold truth is that mice in America this year will cause nearly one billion dollars damage. In addition, there is the unknown cost of mouse-borne diseases such as typhus, infectious jaundice, amebiasis, and a mysterious modern disease — rickettsial-pox, a fever accompanied by severe headache and a rash.

For every mouse in your house you pay $10 a year. A house mouse may trim its teeth by gnawing a hole in your door or wall, or on the leg of a chair. Books, clothing, papers and insulation may be damaged by female mice seeking nesting material.

Multiply Rapidly
Mice mature within three months of birth. A mature mouse can bear as many as 120 offspring a year. This means that one pair of mice left unmolested in your home might multiply several hundred times in 12 months.

A cat is not the answer to the mouse problem. Ordinarily cats serve only to frighten mice into hiding.

Professional mouse-proofing is the quickest way to obtain protection for your home. However, this is sometimes expensive and, in small towns, often not available.

Because of this, such experts as John Beck, a Department of Agriculture representative stationed at Ohio State University, suggest it is more practical for each family to take steps to protect its own home.

Good housekeeping is the first step. Mice thrive on filth. Make sure food is not left in the open and that scraps are placed in covered containers or garbage disposals.

Keep Basement Clean
Particular care should be taken to keep the basement clean. Proper lighting will eliminate dark corners and other hiding places.

Proper janitor service and careful attention to garbage disposal is important. Faulty incinerators in basements at Kew Gardens, N.Y., caused a dangerous rickettsial pox epidemic in 1947 which infested a three-block area.

All openings must be closed. Experts say mice are so plastic they can flatten themselves and squeeze through any opening larger than one-half inch in diameter.

Check Openings
Pipes and wires should be checked at the point where they enter your house. Cement openings around them or cover holes with a strong wire screen called hardware cloth.

Fit basement drainage pipes with tight covers. Sills should be put under doors and windows so mice cannot squeeze under them.

With all sources of entry closed, you're safe from outside mice, and ready to begin eliminating any that have already set up housekeeping in your home.

This is a relatively easy job. Mice spend their lives ordinarily in an area no larger than 15-feet in diameter. They usually locate in cupboards, closets, or behind stoves and refrigerators.

Effective placing of snap traps and poison in these areas will rid your home of rodents.

Traps—cheap enough so that you can buy a dozen without great expense—are most effective when placed in series of three or more. Speed and intelligence will often enable a mouse to evade a single trap.

Enlarges Surface
Adding a two-inch square of corrugated cardboard to trap triggers will enlarge the trapping surface and double the effectiveness of traps.

Use fresh bait. Smear peanut butter over the trap or put down a chunk of chocolate with nuts. Sprinkle oats over the bait to make it more attractive.

Vary the bait so mice do not learn to associate danger with the smell of a particular food. This is easy, since mice like most foods that humans eat.

Arsenic and strychnine are quick killers. But because children or pets may unwittingly eat baited food, these poisons should only be used by professional exterminators.

For the average homeowner, it's safer to use Warfarin, Pival, Fumarin, or D-Con. These are sold at drugstores. They are called anticoagulant poisons because they kill by preventing normal blood clotting.

Feed Pets Well
To cut down chances of secondary poisoning, pets should be well-fed. Care should be taken to make the bait as unattractive as possible for cats and dogs. Never use meat as a bait.

For large infestations, the Department of Agriculture recommends a do-it-yourself bait mix:

Mix 3 1/4 pounds corn meal, one pound oats, 1/4 pound powdered sugar, 1/4 pound vegetable oil, and 1/4 pound antioagulant poison.

Experts say this freshly-mixed bait will have a longer, stronger action in slipping your mice a "mickey."

PREDICTS LABOR SHORT
Washington —UPI— Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell predicts employment will increase to the point where some areas will have definite labor shortages by the end of the year.

"All the economic indicators indicate that we are on the upswing," he said in a television interview Wednesday.

"I would predict that by the end of 1959 we would be in a position of minimum unemployment," he said.

Los Angeles —UPI— Neil R. Murray, 69, veteran newspaper reporter and publisher of the El Monte (Calif.) Herald, died Wednesday at Good Samaritan hospital of leukemia.

Increased Trade Said To Hold Key To Future Peace

New York —UPI— Increased international trade holds the key to the future peace and prosperity of the free world, says a leading industrial showman.

Charles Snitow, who produces a number of trade fairs, said increased trade not only brings money into a country's coffers, but also builds goodwill and trust between it and other nations.

"We, as Americans, have come to realize that world trade is in fact an economic denominator among all nations," Snitow said.

"We know full well that the sale of foreign goods and commodities to this country generates the purchasing power necessary for building good customers abroad for our American-made products."

REMODELING — Three local men, including the new superintendent of the Medford Gospel Mission, paint in the kitchen of the former San Louis hotel, South Front st., which will house the local Mission. The Mission, organized last October in Medford, held its first business meeting in January. Dedication for the Mission has been tentatively set for March 15. Since the first of the year between 15 and 30 men have worked on the remodeling of the Front st. building on Saturdays. The partitions in the old hotel have been removed and work is nearing completion in the kitchen, chapel, dormitory areas, and staff rooms. The Mission, which will operate for the purpose of reaching the "unfortunate" with preaching of the gospel and to assist in the feeding, clothing and lodging of those who are in need, will be directed by William Howard, (center) former Bakersfield, Calif., businessman. At left is Joe Bartlett, another of the volunteer workers, and Leon Stansfield (right). President of the Mission is Fred Robinson.

where more than 60 countries go all-out to sell their goods, attract tourists and promote new investment capital.

The third annual fair will be held in New York May 8-19, he said. It is expected to be even bigger than last year's show, when more than 144,700 trade buyers, merchandise executives and manufacturers' representatives placed orders for products running into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

"The fair has become the greatest single market place for foreign goods in the Western Hemisphere," Snitow said. "At the fair, buyers for American industry can find everything from drill presses and sewing machines to flowers and food."

In addition, many companies at the fair also place great stress on tourism. Some of them have built elaborate exhibits ranging from an Oriental temple to a tropical island.

386,000 Attracted
More than 386,000 persons attended last year's show during the five days of public admission.
