

Training Program Announced for High School Instructors

Science teachers in high schools in the Medford area will have an opportunity to receive specialized science training under a new science teacher education program recently announced by the National Science Foundation.

Two Medford teachers who have participated in the program in previous years were Montae Kounz and Gatewood Smith. Local school officials report that four or five local teachers have applied this year.

Under the program, which will be administered in the Northwest by the University of Oregon graduate school, specially-trained personnel will be sent into high schools to work with science teachers in developing improved teaching methods.

$382,000 Grant
The university has received a $382,000 grant from the foundation to finance the program. It is the largest single grant to be received by the university, it was reported.

The aim of the program is to stimulate the interest and spread the influence of competent teachers of science, to encourage the building of simple laboratory apparatus in smaller and poorly equipped high schools, and to provide secondary school students a deeper appreciation of science and to help motivate competent young people into scientific careers.

The project will involve the intensive training and service of 20 carefully selected high school teachers in biology, chemistry, physics, and geology. These teachers will help train high school teachers throughout Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Utah, and Wyoming.

Summer on Campus

The teachers chosen will spend this summer on the university campus where they will be trained to lecture in general fields they represent. The teachers at that time will assemble their demonstration apparatus which will be installed in 20 station wagons, to be used by them in visiting the high schools of the Northwest.

The traveling teachers would remain for one week at each high school.

Boiler Explosion Rips Apartments

Fair Lawn, N. J.—UPI—A thunderous oil boiler explosion ripped apart three duplex apartments in a garden apartment development Sunday, killing a 3-year-old boy and injuring six other persons.

The blast occurred in the boiler room of a two-story brick building in an apartment development.

Two hours after the blast, searchers found the body of James Wodruft Jr., covered by his mattress, a teddy bear and toy train nearby. He had been buried under a pile of plaster, brick and wood.

His parents, James Wodruft, 31, and Rita, 29, were reported in fair condition at a Paterson hospital, with multiple abrasions.

Also injured were Mrs. Jean O'Neill, 45, with a possible leg fracture; her daughter, Marie, 22, of New York City, burns and possible fracture of the left leg; Theodore Plasky, 25, of Harrison, N.J., treated for abrasions and released; and his mother, Mrs. Laura Plasky, 64. Mrs. Plasky, who was buried in the debris for a half hour, was reported in critical condition.

Brandt Explains True Russian Aims

Berlin—UPI—West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt said Sunday night he had found many Asian leaders on his recent tour of the Far East who were impressed with Soviet demands to make Berlin a free, demilitarized city.

"Many were astonished when I explained the Soviet Union's true aims," Brandt said in a radio address.

He said he explained that if the Soviet proposals were accepted, Soviet troops "could squeeze the city like one squeezes out a lemon."
