Harman On All Coast Cage Team

San Francisco —UPI—Doug Smart, University of Washington's talented all-around performer, heads the cast for the 1959 United Press International All-West Coast basketball team announced today. Smart, one of the top scorers in the West and the No. 1 rebound artist in the Pacific Coast Conference, was named "Player of the Year" in a close ballot with UCLA's Walt Torrence. Pete Newell, who piloted University of California's Golden Bears to the PCC championship, is easily picked as "Coach of the Year."

Beats, Gaels Shut Out Surprisingly enough, the voters failed to name a single man to the first team from the PCC title-winning squad and St. Mary's West Coast Athletic Conference champions. Along with Smart and Torrence on the first team were Lee Harman, Oregon State; Charley Brown of Seattle U. and Paul Newman, Stanford. California clicked for three men on the six-man second team, placing Darrell Imhoff, Al Buch and Dennis Fitzpatrick.

Ballots were counted on a basis of 10 points for the first team and five for the second. Imhoff, Tom Meschery of St. Mary's and Fitzpatrick all got as many or more first-place votes than Newman, but the Stanford guard was named on nearly every ballot for a first or second-place berth. John Werhas, Southern California's fine performer, barely missed making the second team as he was nosed out by Bruno Boin of Washington and Dave Klurman of College of Pacific.

Top Scorers Dominate The all-around strength of the first team is shown in the season's averages. Torrence leads in the Pacific Coast conference in scoring; Smart was second, Neumann third, Harman fifth. Brown was the big gun in another fine season for the Seattle Chieftains. Smart was far-and-away the best rebound man in the West; and he led the PCC in field goal percentage.

Honorable Mention: Werhas, USC (50); Ogorek, Seattle (40); Wright, COPE (40); Don St. Mary's (35); O. Alcorn, Fresno State (25); Sobrero, Santa Clara (20); Anderson, Seattle Pacific (20); Coleman, Idaho (15); Liveous, Idaho (15); Forbes, Pepperdine (15); Hubbard, Long Beach State (10); Hearin Lmbr. Co. (10); Armstrong, Portland (10); Ross, Washington State (10); Blue, Pepperdine (10); Bastardi, Los Angeles State (10); LeCour, USF (10); Burgess, Gonzaga (10); and five points each for: Irvine, Washington; Kent Miller, UCLA; Arrillaga, Stanford; Curtis, Pacific Lutheran; Panel, Portland; Sigaty, St. Mary's; Doid, St. Mary's; and Mobley, Sacramento State.

New York —UPI—Frank McGuire, a Tar Heel rebel from the sidelines of New York, asserted today that at long last the South has risen again. The fireworks aren't as violent as they were the first time around. But this time there's almost as much hootin' and hollerin' and excitement as well as a great deal more shootin'.

of that impulsiveness with which they flocked to the Stars and Bars. The games are a cross between an old time revival meeting and the battle of Bull Run. "Take Saturday night for instance," said the North Carolina coach with the air of a man who would be glad to give it away. "North Carolina State is leading by 13 points with 6:55 to play in our game at the Raleigh Coliseum. Then, bang, the lights go out and 12,500 people sit there for five minutes in the darkness. "When the lights went back on, the clock had been pushed ahead a minute," he added. "Somebody was really trying to help State get it over. They did it by smashing in the door of the transformer room, defying the sign which said 'danger—keep out,' and had pulled the main switch."

This uprising is concerned with basketball, a sport in which Dixie at last has taken its place as a section which bows to none when it comes to overall enthusiasm and ability. "You can believe that," McGuire says in a voice which, after seven years in the South, is a mulligan stew mixture between a pastrami sandwich and hominy grits. "Basketball in the South, after years of being on its way, has definitely arrived. On any basis it stacks up with overall in the country and we can even give those damn Yankees from Indiana a few lessons in enthusiasm." Resemble Revival Meeting The descendants of the hot-heads who fired on Fort Sumter haven't lost a shade

Giants Meet Red Sox

Phoenix, Ariz.—UPI—The San Francisco Giants versus the Boston Red Sox here today, but the latter club will include 11 players who were on the pennant-winning San Francisco Seals team that Boston sponsored in the Bay city's last year in the Pacific Coast league.

Among the former Seals are outfielders Marty Keough and Bill Renna, Catcher Haywood Sullivan and Pitchers Ted Bowsfield and Jerry Casales. The game, in which Ted Williams may or may not make an appearance, could throw the Cactus league leadership into a two-way deadlock should the Giants win. The Beantowners have taken the measure of the Chicago Cubs twice, while the Giants have split with Cleveland in their two starts.

Williams, who has still to make his first exhibition game appearance of the year, may turn up in a pinch-hitting role. But the Red Sox camp announced Sunday that he would make his starting lineup debut Friday night in San Diego, his home town.

Wyoming Coach Resigns Job

Cheyenne, Wyo.—UPI—University of Wyoming basketball coach Everett F. Shelton bowed out Monday night after 20 years, eight Skyline conference crowns, a national championship and the close of his worst season. Shelton announced his resignation at a Cheyenne Quarterback club banquet in honor of the 1959 Cowboy squad, which dropped 22 contests and won but four. He said he was accepting another coaching position which was "less demanding." He did not name the team he would be leading. Shelton, 60, won 329 games in his two decades at Laramie, dropping 199. His teams piled up eight Skyline championships, and the 1943 squad won the NCAA title. The last conference title was won by the Cowboys just last year.

Other cities that had received serious consideration were Los Angeles, Baltimore, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Colorado Spring, Philadelphia, Las Vegas, Nev., Colorado Springs, Colo., Indianapolis and Honolulu.

Greaves Favorite In TV Bout

New York —UPI—A middleweight fight at New York and the Western Golden Gloves finals at Chicago stand out on this week's boxing schedule. Wilfie Greaves, middleweight champion of Canada, is a slight favorite at 6-5 to beat West Indian Yama Bahama Friday night at Madison Square Garden in their nationally televised (NBC) 10-rounder.

The documents specified only that the fight must be held in the United States before Sept. 30. And the promoter can decide whether it will be televised to homes or sent to theaters on closed-circuit TV.
