Intrigued with the idea that the young, interesting and attractive Mrs. John Kennedy might, through the turn of the political wheel in the United States, become the nation's First Lady, Potpourri and Pal Peg did some research. After consulting a dictionary, the World Almanac and the World Book encyclopedia, we discovered that Mrs. Kennedy wouldn't be the youngest First Lady. The grapevine says Mrs. Kennedy is 28 or 29; Mrs. Grover Cleveland was but 22 when she became First Lady, and Julia Gardiner was only 24 years old when she became President Tyler's second wife.

According to the World Book, the former Frances Folsom was married to Grover Cleveland in 1886. He was 49 years old. The Book records that "she was one of the youngest women ever to be mistress of the White House," but doesn't say who was the youngest. It adds that the Cleveland's marriage was a happy one, in spite of the differences in their ages, and that they had five children, one born in the White House. It declares that Mrs. Cleveland was equal to the task of presiding over the home of the President, that she was widely known for her charm as a hostess and that although she shunned newspaper reporters and publicity, that her every word and action was watched.

Most of the President's wives were in their 40's, 50's or 60's at the time of their husband's inauguration. The wife of the first President, Martha Washington, was 57, and John Adams' wife was 53. The present First Lady was 57 when she went to live in the White House, and Mrs. Harry Truman was 60. The average age of President's wives at inaugural time was 49.5 years.

Since sometimes the official hostess of the White House was not the President's wife, it may be that some of these women were younger even than Mrs. Cleveland, although it seems highly unlikely. Mrs. Andrew Jackson, 62 when her husband was inaugurated, never lived in the White House, and his wife's niece, Mrs. Emily Donelson, and the wife of his adopted son, Andrew Jackson Jr., were his hostesses. Mrs. Martin Van Buren died before her husband was elected to the presidency and the wife of her son, Abraham Van Buren, was White House hostess during Van Buren's term.

Mrs. William Henry Harrison, whose husband was President for only 31 days (he died of pneumonia shortly after the inauguration) never left their home in North Bend, Ohio, for Washington. She was 66 at the time of inauguration. The wife of her son, Col. W. H. Harrison Jr., stayed in the White House during the President's illness.

John Tyler's first wife died in the White House at 52, and his son's wife, Mrs. Robert Tyler, presided as hostess for a time. In 1844 President Tyler married 24-year-old Julia Gardiner. The next mistress of the White House, Mrs. James K. Polk, was 42 her first year in the White House. She is recorded as a "strict Methodist who permitted neither liquor or dancing in the presidential mansion."

Another relative who served as official hostess of the White House was Mrs. W. W. S. Bliss, daughter of the Zachary Taylors, who presided in the place of her mother. A daughter of the Millard Fillmore, Mary Abigail, was official hostess for her father because her mother was an invalid.

James Buchanan was a bachelor and during his term as president his niece, Harriet Lane, orphan daughter of his sister, was White House hostess.

Further study of the fine print in the World Almanac brought out that a daughter of the Andrew Jacksons, Mrs. D. T. Patterson, wife of a judge, substituted for her invalid mother, 55, as White House mistress. Mrs. Chester A. Arthur died before her husband's term as president, and his sister, Mrs. John E. McElroy of Albany, N. Y., was his official hostess.

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, first head of the Daughters of the American Revolution, died in the White House in 1892, at the age of 60, and later President Harrison married his first wife's niece, a widow.

President Theodore Roosevelt also had two wives. The first, Alice Hathaway Lee, died in 1884 after having been married but four years. In 1886, Mr. Roosevelt married Edith Kermit Carow, who was 40 at the time of his inauguration.

If Senator John Kennedy should become the next President, possibly Mrs. Kennedy would compare to Dolly Madison as a White House Mistress. The World Almanac describes her as the first "social leader" in the White House. (Mrs. Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss of Maclean, Va., is in the Social Register.) It is said that Mrs. Madison was respected for her tact and intelligence, and she helped President Madison edit his highly important records of the Constitutional Convention.

Dolly Madison was unique in that she was hostess for two different presidents. A native of Virginia, Dolly first married John Todd, and after his death married James Madison. When he became secretary of state in 1801, she served as hostess for President Jefferson, a widower. Mrs. Madison was 41 when her husband was inaugurated. She presided at the first presidential ball in 1809. After her husband's death in 1836, Mrs. Madison returned to Washington as a social leader; she took part in the dedication of the Washington monument and sent the first personal message over S.F.B. Morse's telegraph wire.

Jacqueline Kennedy has a background of wealth, culture, education and travel. (Her collegiate work was at Vassar in this country and the Sorbonne in Paris.) Add to this her personal charm, her appeal as a young mother (the Kennedys have one daughter, Caroline, 15 months old) her sense of fashion and her photogenic face and smile - it all sounds like she would be a considerable asset to a candidate husband. But Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, whose husband is governor of New York and who, it is speculated, might be the Republican presidential candidate, has all these attributes and qualities, too.—O.S.

Ruch PTA To Mark Centennial

Ruch-Ruch Parent-Teacher association will sponsor an evening's entertainment in history at Upper Applegate grange hall Saturday, March 14, at 8 p.m., commemorating Oregon's Centennial. Teachers of the early 1900's will be honored on this occasion, and among these are Miss Kate Buckley, Mrs. Lora Pernoll, Miss Eva Couch, Mrs. Bert Harr, Mrs. Nelson Pursel, Mrs. Lester Wertz, Mrs. Ray Offenbacher, Mrs. Frank Ditsworth, and others.

A play with local setting in the 50's before schools existed in the valley will be presented. It was written by Mr. and Mrs. Larry Tweedy, assisted by Mrs. Edward Ramsey. There is a cast of 11 characters portraying events of a hundred years ago. A square dance exhibition by experienced square dancers of the valley forms the closing scene. Following the play an illustrated history of Applegate valley schools will be given by Boyd Gibson, Ruch principal, with old time school photos flashed on the screen. Refreshments will be served following the play. There will be no charge, and a special invitation is extended all early day teachers.

Reservations Open for Show

Reservations are still open for the Saturday night showing of Medford Junior Service league's annual spring fashion review it was announced today. The Friday luncheon show is sold out. Both performances are to be at Rogue Valley Country club, the Friday event at 12:30 p.m. and the dinner Saturday at 8 p.m.

Proceeds from the shows go to support the league's kindergarten for hard-of-hearing children.

Round Dancing To Be Taught

A class in round dancing will be held in the Wilson school gymnasium starting at 8 p.m. Friday, Mrs. Douglas Fosbury Medford, has announced. The two-hour session each Friday night will include instructions on current round dances. Mrs. Fosbury will be instructor.

Mrs. John Kennedy, wife of a United States Senator who might be the Democratic party's candidate for the presidency in 1960, is shown here shortly after the Kennedys arrived in Medford last Friday to attend the annual Roosevelt Memorial dinner. Mrs. Kennedy, one of the nominees for the "ten best dressed women" list, is interested in literature and art as well as politics and is sympathetic toward the press. She once worked on a Washington, D. C. daily as a photographer-reporter and "knows what it's like to be on the other side of the picture." (Kenn Knacksstedt photo)

Los Angeles Band To Play Tonight
The Rogue Valley Square Dance Callers association will sponsor a special square dance at the Square Corral at Camp White starting at 8:30 o'clock this evening.

Jack Barbour and his Rhythm Rustlers, a square dance band from Los Angeles, will provide music. Members of the callers association will call squares.
