

Daylight Saving Time Eyed at Chamber Roundtable Lunch

Daylight saving drew compounded interest yesterday noon (P.S.T.) at a lively open forum sponsored by the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce roundtable committee.

The cost of discussing it, several persons pointed out, is often lost tempers.

Although no such losses were sustained yesterday, opinion was openly divided. As Otto Ewaldsen pointed out, "One thing people get pretty selfish about is their time."

A vote at the end of the session revealed that with 20 persons present there were 9 votes in favor of daylight saving, 5 votes opposing it and 7 indifferent - with Seth Bullis voting both for and against.

Manipulation of Clocks

Some asserted that after all daylight saving time is merely a manipulation of clocks, not of nature - and if people want to save daylight they have only to rise and retire accordingly.

But human nature and clocks are not so easily dis-gaged. "People," Ewaldsen said, "live by the clock."

One argument brought forward in support of daylight saving time yesterday was conformity to other parts of the country. A second was the benefits from such conformity to the local economy.

Those representing radio, television and stock brokerage interests discussed the problem of communicating with the east coast.

Four Hours Difference

When New York City, for example, goes on daylight saving time while Medford remains on standard the differential becomes four hours. Hence, when businessmen close their doors at 5 p.m. there it is only 1 p.m. here.

Those advancing the argument for conformity stated that daylight saving should be instituted nationally. Under the present situation it has been implemented in limited areas only - although these areas represent the greatest population concentrations.

Bullis suggested a compromise - changing clocks across the nation, but only half an hour instead of a full hour.

Three groups opposing daylight saving time are theater interests, labor unions and farmers.

Strong Lobby

"Theaters have a good strong lobby" in Salem, Ray Johnson reported. The extra hour of daylight in the evening would be no boon to drive-in proprietors.

Labor unions were not represented at yesterday's meeting.

Earl Jossy, county extension agent, and Merton Bradshaw, an officer of the Jackson County Livestock association, spoke for agricultural interests.

Jossy stated that formerly daylight saving would have worked a hardship on small herd dairymen who would have had to milk their cows in darkness, to conform to collection schedules, and then wait a while for daylight before they could go to work in the fields. He said that the collection deadline now is not so crucial, with storage facilities improved and collections often made every other day.

Farmer's Objection

Also mentioned as a farmer's objection was the problem of asking hired hands to come to work and leave at different hours during daylight saving time - since field work goes by the sun whatever the clocks might say.

Cows, someone pointed out, also are affected.

adjust to schedule changes more easily than men.

Johnson related that on one occasion when sentiment was running high a farm woman telephoned the radio station to object strenuously to daylight saving. He said he asked her if the cows knew the difference.

"They know as well as my dog does," he quoted her as replying. And, he added, "What could I say to that?"

Arguments of Consolidation Of Medford-Phoenix Aired

Approximately 100 persons attended a meeting last night in Phoenix called by the Committee for Investigation of the Medford-Phoenix School Consolidation.

Fred Wilcox, Camp Baker rd., Phoenix, opened the meeting by briefly presenting three alternatives facing the Phoenix school district. It may remain as School District 4, join with Medford or consolidate with Talent.

"I would like to see Phoenix stay as it is, if possible, and grow as a district," Wilcox said. "We have some of the best instructors and courses. But, we need money for taxes. The major portion of the district's income comes from the north end and if that portion should be removed we would lose this major income source."

With Medford

If Phoenix should go with Medford, students from Phoenix would be offered more courses and would receive a better education for the tax money spent, Wilcox said.

That would place Wagner Creek, the south portion of the Phoenix district with Talent and Ashland. Considering the proposal for consolidation of Talent and Phoenix school districts, Wilcox said Talent is not financially healthy. If this should go through all the students would be penalized, he added.

Referring to an advertisement the committee placed in Sunday's Mail Tribune, Wilcox admitted to omissions, "some intentional, some unintentional."

He referred to an article in Sunday's Oregonian which stated the number of students from too small high schools made it necessary to have remedial courses or a continuance of high school courses.

Mark Norton, of Phoenix, asked how a portion of the Phoenix school district could join with Medford if Phoenix didn't want to give up its district.

Elliott Becken, assistant superintendent of Medford schools, explained that it would have to be handled by the county boundary board following receipt of petitions with the signatures of those property owners affected.

It has been the boundary board's policy not to approve such an annexation unless it is to the best interest of the youngsters affected, he added.

The proposed consolidation with five school districts would increase the Medford school district from 22 2/10 miles to 361 2/10 square miles, he said. The boundary board usually takes jurisdiction only on smaller pieces of property, he said.

Tax Figures

Richard W. Cortright, Medford attorney, and Phoenix committee member, agreed that it would be impossible to project present tax figures to give a conclusive picture of the future financial picture with consolidation.

Wilcox said Medford contributed $120,000 to the county school equalization fund. Phoenix contributed from $12,000 to $15,000, and Talent drew out $50,000 from the fund.

The school equalization fund is the uniform levy spread over all districts. It should amount to 50 per cent of the estimated local school tax levied for operating purposes. It is allocated to each of the districts on the basis of average daily membership.

Medford has selected a site for a second high school on a 35-acre tract east of Crater Lake ave., and across from Brookhurst orchards, Becken said. This was selected for the existing Medford and non-high districts, he added.

There would have to be a good reason to give it up, he added, answering the question if a second high school might be situated in the future in or near Phoenix.

Another High School

Becken said if the Medford high school enrollment reached 1,600 another high school would be planned and planning and construction would take approximately 2 1/2 to 3 years. Additions are now being made to Medford High school which would provide for a maximum enrollment of 1,800, Becken said. Present enrollment is 1,300.

The present Medford High school could not provide a vocational agricultural program, Becken said. Whether this could be provided in the new high school "is another matter," he said. "It's a matter of weighing the significant needs of the students in relation to other vocational needs," he said.

Other arguments presented favoring the Medford consolidation were Talent would lose its state equalization fund if it goes into Phoenix. Medford is growing south and a Phoenix-Medford consolidation would be a natural result, better preparation could be given for college with the larger number and more intensive courses offered in Medford.

Against Consolidation

Those against Medford-Phoenix consolidation argued: Consolidation with Talent would give the Phoenix High school close to 300 enrollment and natural growth would take up the slack. Phoenix already gives good basic college prep courses; Talent district buildings could be used with consolidation with Phoenix-Talent and would alleviate any overcrowding of the Phoenix elementary classes.

Wall Street Chatter

New York (UPI) - The market sentiment index of International Statistical Bureau shows improvement and the gain indicates the internal structure of the market has improved recently despite the advance in prices, the bureau holds.

Reynolds and Co. believes the Berlin situation is a minor may give the list some anxious moments before it is finally resolved.

There still are no signs of any long-term technical vulnerability in the state market, says Edmund W. Tabeil, analyst for Walston and Co.

Excellent performance of the industrial division indicates that stock values will be still higher in the foreseeable future, says Van Alstyne and Co.

The market looks capable of going much higher in time, says E. F. Hutton and Co. which lists some stocks that look technically higher-Caterpillar Tractor, Owens Products, Eversharp, Owens Corning Fiberglass, Penn - Dixie Cement, Phillips Petroleum, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Radio Corp., Rheem, Robertshaw-Fulton, and Scott Paper.

J. W. Sparks and Co. notes the rumor market is quiet. One item being discussed now is a possible union of Liffon and Underwood, the firm says.

More Snow Adds To Midwest Woes

By United Press International

Fresh snows and freezing rains piled new woes on the Great Lakes region today in the wake of a paralyzing Midwestern snowstorm.

Although spring is only four days away, winter showed no signs of relenting as one to four inches of snow swept across Southern Wisconsin and Northern Illinois into Indiana and lower Michigan.

Nearly four inches of snow fell in Western Michigan during the night and a total of six inches was expected before the state's second snowstorm in 48 hours ends. The new snow sent the total snow measurement at Grand Rapids, Mich., past the 100-inch mark.

Steel shares started. The best levels showed advances running to more than two points in the group. Automobile stocks joined the upturn with gains running to more than a point. Oils picked up demand and moved ahead. Rails improved substantially and utilities all but made a new high since 1930.
