Rib-Type Glass Highly Prized for Simplicity

One of the earliest designs to appear in pressed glass is what is known as the rib type. In its basic form it consists of nothing more than vertical flutings, giving much the effect of a bank of organ pipes.

Soon after this design appeared, in the first half of the 1850s, manufacturers began to elaborate upon it. Usually, the elaboration consisted of adding a flower motif of some kind that lay against the background of vertical ribbing. Some of these newer types were done in excellent taste, such as the ribbed grape and bell-flower patterns and have fully as great value as that of the earliest plain ribbed glass. As a general rule, however, piece for piece, the early plain ribbed glass brings a higher price.

An egg cup that I saw recently is a case in point. It was one of the covered type

Rewards to Holder

At this moment you may have much more money in your billfold than you realize. It all depends on how rare some of the bills are.

If you happen to have any of the $1 silver certificates—and you probably have—you will be around $100 richer if one of them falls in the right part of the series of 1928-E.

The fact that the big, old-fashioned bills were not replaced by the small, modern ones until 1929 has nothing to do with the series 1928-E, some of which were printed as late as the mid-1930s. That, or any other series number, appears on all small bills and is almost certain to be found on the obverse side, just to the right of the lower part of Washington's portrait, and a little to the lower left of the blue seal.

Now then, if your $1 silver certificate of the 1928-E series is one of the more valuable kind, it will have the signatures of Secretary of the Treasury of

Charm of Early-American Towns Caught by Bennett

Prints of American cities made during the early or mid-1800s generally command a fair price regardless of who made them, but any that were painted or engraved by W. J. Bennett are pretty sure to be among the more valuable. William James Bennett came to the United States in 1826, when he was 39 and after he had already won a substantial reputation in England as a water colorist, landscape painter, etcher and engraver. His work had been exhibited in London several times beginning in 1808, shortly after his 21st birthday.

Though he continued to paint landscapes, he was quick to see that there was a market for pictures of the swiftly growing cities of America. Except for prints, there was no other way at the time by which people could have a picture in their homes of their cities as they knew and had known them. And while it may not seem likely today, the rate of change was just about as great then as now.

Accordingly, Bennett made several visits to different cities producing prints that are

4-H Club News

The Talent Bummers 4-H club held their meeting at Nancy Day's house March 21. We asked everyone to tell about their sheep and whether they had their sheep yet. Mr. Wheeler gave a talk on how to take care of a sheep and how to get rid of ticks and lice.

Only about 30 tons are mined each year of the platinum group of metals—platinum, palladium, rhodium, ruthenium, iridium and osmium. This compares with 1,200 tons of gold and 7,000 tons of silver annually.
