

DISASTER STRIKES—Alphonse Woodall is in Sun Valley Hospital near Los Angeles with a broken leg and two fractured heels as the result of his human kite stunt for the "You Asked For It" television program. Wearing roller skate equipped skis, Woodall was towed into the air by a car (upper left). Fifty feet in the air, his kite rig fell forward (upper right) and begins to collapse (lower left). Woodall hits the ground (lower right). Who asked for it? Woodall himself!

Facts About Service Draft Related

Washington — UPI — President Eisenhower has signed legislation extending the Selective Service law until July 1, 1963. Below, in question and answer form, are vital facts about the draft and how it affects young men.

Q. Who must register for the draft?

A. Every young man within five days after his 18th birthday. The only exceptions are servicemen already on active duty, foreign diplomats and a few other special types of aliens. There are severe penalties for failure to register.

Q. Where do you register?

A. At your local Selective Service board. You must also notify this board each time you change your address and whenever there is any change in your status that might affect your draft liability.

Q. When does a registrant become liable for call to military service?

A. Theoretically at 18½ years of age. Actually, no one is ever drafted before 19, and the average age of induction is about 22½.

Q. At what age do you become draft-proof?

A. For all practical purposes at age 26. In theory, anyone who gets a deferment before reaching 26 becomes liable for call-up until age 35. But this is a technicality which is meaningless short of total mobilization, since men over 26 are at the bottom of the list of priorities for induction.

Q. What are the chances of getting through to age 26 without military service?

A. Government studies show that approximately 55 youths out of 100 — slightly more than half — will see military duty before reaching 26.

Not All Drafted

Q. Are all of those who go into uniform drafted?

A. No, draft inductions account for only one-fifth of the new manpower which comes into the services each year. Most young men prefer to sign up for one of the 34 voluntary enlistment programs offered by the armed forces rather than wait to be drafted.

Q. What are these enlistment programs?

A. They offer youths a wide variety of alternatives—from six-months active duty training followed by several years in the drilling reserve to a full four-year hitch as a service regular. An official pamphlet giving all details can be obtained by writing to: "It's Your Choice," Washington, 25, D. C. That's all the address you need.

Q. What happens to the 45 young men out of every 100 who do not see military service?

A. Many of them (about 33 out of 100) are found physically or mentally disqualified for service. The remaining 12 out of 100 are deferred or exempted for various reasons.

Q. What sort of reasons?

A. Because they are going to school or working at an essential job; because they have families to support; because they are ministers, divinity students, congressmen or state legislators, conscientious objectors, or members of a few other groups specifically covered by the law.

Q. Are high school students ever drafted?

A. They are automatically deferred until they graduate, quit school or reach age 20.

Washington School

Washington school was the scene of a "Safety Panorama" Wednesday afternoon, March 3.

First grade students stressed the important rules of playground safety.

Second graders illustrated the plight of "Nit-Wits" who do not observe safety rules in the home.

Third grade students demonstrated proper procedure for crossing streets and reviewed other good rules to use in going to and from school.

Fourth graders recited bicycle rules as told by Mr. Bicycle himself.

Fifth graders acted out the predicament of the foolish fisherman and careless hunter.

Special room students demonstrated proper conduct in boarding and riding a school bus.

Sixth grade students proved that safety can be fun, when a group of clowns showed the dangers of carelessness in sports.

Through verse, song, narration and demonstration, the principles of safe living as taught through the year, were reviewed.

The University of Minnesota football stadium can accommodate about 66,000 persons, and its indoor basketball arena can take care of about 19,999, the latter a Midwest record.

Q. What about college students?

A. Very liberal deferments are available to college students. Any student who has a respectable class standing or who makes a passing score on the Selective Service college qualification test which is given annually can be confident of being deferred until he graduates. Deferments also are granted for law, medical and other graduate students who have good academic records.

Q. To whom are occupational deferments granted?

A. To those who are performing "essential" jobs. The rules are complicated and the best way to get details is from your local draft board. Generally speaking, any youth who embarks on a career in teaching, science, or engineering can count on getting an occupational deferment.

May Extend Deferment

Q. Is a deferment merely a temporary reprieve from the draft?

A. Theoretically, yes. Deferments are usually granted for one year at the time, or even less. But if you continue the work or the studies that made you eligible for deferment, it is quite possible to keep getting one deferment after another until you reach 26.

Q. Can a young man avoid the draft by getting married?

A. Husbands as such have no special draft status. But fathers are automatically placed at the bottom of the 1-A manpower barrel which means that they become, for all practical purposes, draft-exempt.

Agronomy Land Bids Lacking

No bids have yet been received for the agronomy station property on Culver rd., near Talent, according to the county court.

The property consisting of approximately 45 acres and four buildings has been up for bid for about a month, the county court said. A number of inquiries from outside the county have been received however.

The property may be placed on multiple listing and a commission given real estate representatives who sell it, the county court reported.

The property was vacated when personnel, equipment and plantings were shifted to the new Southern Oregon Branch Experiment Station on Hanley rd. near Jacksonville. The old Oregon station property on the South Pacific highway near Talent will be vacated completely when the fruit trees are gradually shifted to the new property. However, the wood frame building has been vacated and is now rented.

The agronomy station land is level and has no apparent drainage problems, the court said. The soil consists of gravel, clay loam and is considered to be tillable free soil. The property also is adaptable for subdividing into acreage tracts.

Wrecking Yard Man Fined in Court

Jack Lauren Keck, operator of a wrecking yard at 404 Chestnut st., Medford, pleaded guilty in district court Tuesday to failure to confine wrecking business to a building or fenced enclosure. He was fined $200 and sentenced to 10 days. A total of $170 and the 10 day jail sentence was suspended on condition that the wrecking yard be enclosed or cleaned up within a week.

Keck was arrested on order of the county court after having been warned several times to place a six-foot fence around his wrecking yard, it was reported.
