

Congregational Church To Observe 5th Anniversary

The fifth anniversary of the organization of the Congregational church of Medford will be celebrated with a banquet on Friday evening, April 10, and the service of worship the following Sunday.

United Church of Christ Symbolizes Drive for Unity

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International
America's newest major religious body symbolizes, in its name and history, the powerful drive for Christian unity that is gradually breaking down the ancient barriers of Protestant denominationalism.

Its name is the United Church of Christ. It was formed on June 25, 1957, by the merger of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

When the merger is completed, the United Church will have a membership of 2,100,000, and will be the nation's seventh largest Protestant body.

Although many congregations have begun using the new name, no local church is legally affiliated with the United Church of Christ at present. It will exist only in spirit and on paper until a constitution, now being drafted, is completed and approved.

Some local Congregationalist churches have served notice they will not affiliate with the United Church. They have formed the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches. This organization reports a membership of 171 local churches, out of a total of 5,544 Congregationalist Christian churches in the nation.

Four of the dissenting Congregationalist churches and 10 individuals have filed a suit in the federal district court of New York challenging the legality of the merger. An earlier legal test, in New York state courts, resulted in a clear-cut victory for the pro-merger forces.

Despite these birth pains, the United Church is already regarded by students of church history as a tremendously significant milestone in the ecumenical movement which seeks to draw together the divided Christian family.

Unlike other church mergers of recent years which have united Methodists with Lutherans, and Presbyterians with Presbyterians, the United Church represents the confluence of two entirely distinct streams of Protestant Christianity.

Congregationalism, which came to America aboard the Mayflower in 1620, is an offshoot of the English Reformation. The Puritans felt that the ecclesiastical hierarchy of the Church of England was stifling true Christian faith, so they established in New England a new kind of church in which each local congregation was completely free to manage its own affairs. This emphasis on congregational autonomy remains until this day a distinctive feature of Congregationalist churches.

The Evangelical and Reformed Church is a product of the Continental Reformation led by John Calvin and Martin Luther. It came to America with the first German and Dutch immigrants to Pennsylvania. Like other churches of the Calvinist tradition, it has a representative system of government called the Presbyterian polity in which regional bodies called synods administer many church affairs.

Working out a compromise between these different ecclesiastical structures is the main problem confronting the constitution drafters of the United Church.

There are no major doctrinal issues to be resolved, because both denominations eschew official creeds and leave the individual believer free to work out his own understanding of the Bible within the basic context of faith in Jesus Christ as divine Lord and Savior.

Worship customs vary widely in both denominations with each congregation free to make its own rules.

Daryl Farnham, will preside over the dinner program. Mrs. C. Ivan Burton will speak as one of the church's charter members. The Rev. Fred G. Plocher, minister of the First Congregational church of Ashland, will speak as a neighboring pastor and member of the committee on new churches which formulated plans for the establishment of the church. Mike Travis will speak as one of the original members of the Sunday school and the first president of the Pilgrim Fellowship. He is now a student at Southern Oregon college.

Reservations for the dinner should be made not later than Tuesday morning. They may be made by calling Mrs. Clarence Miller, Spring 3-5189 or the parsonage, Spring 2-8860. There will be no arrangements for the separate care of children but those old enough to enjoy the program will be welcome.

give leadership in organization of the church. A number of people soon became interested, membership preparation classes were held and on April 11, 1954, the 32 charter members were received. This was on a Palm Sunday. In the afternoon the new congregation had a business meeting, adopted a constitution which had been prepared by a committee of their own group, and gave a call to Thomas McCamant to be the pastor.

Steady Growth
During the five years since that time the membership has shown a steady increase and the program of the church has been extended. There have been many improvements to the church buildings and property. The most extensive of these was the re-making of the open pavilion which had been the recreation hall of the Valley school into the present Sunday school building, called Pilgrim House. It is this building in which the banquet will be held on Friday evening. This construction was supervised by Henry Padgham, who was then chairman of the board of trustees.

The church has made much use of the four acre property with its extensive lawns, fields and many trees. The Easter egg hunt for the children has become an annual feature. Picnics have been held under the oak trees and campfires on the less improved portions of the grounds. Blossoms from the many flowering trees and shrubs have been extensively used in the decoration of the church. Another event is the church's annual services held at the rim of Crater lake.

Interest in Community
The church's interest in the community has been expressed in the voter's forums sponsored by the social action committee which have become a regular feature preceding each election.

Sunday morning the church returns to its regular hour of worship and the church school, which are both held at 10 a.m. The Rev. Thomas McCamant begins a series of sermons on "God, Nature and Man." The Sunday topic will be on "Seeking Food from God." The series will be interrupted the following Sunday for the anniversary sermon.

St. Mary's Pupils To Receive First Holy Communion

Seventy-five pupils of St. Mary's school will receive their first holy communion at the 8:30 a.m. mass in Sacred Heart church on Whitsunday.

According to the Very Rev. Carl Mai, the April 5 date was chosen, rather than Mother's Day as in previous years, because it is more in keeping with the spirit of the church liturgy that the reception of the sacrament should take place within the time of the Easter ceremonies.

Music for the occasion will be sung by the fifth grade choir of the school. Many Guests
A request has been made that parishioners plan to attend a mass other than the 8:30 a.m. one this Sunday, if possible, so as to make room for the parents and relatives of the first communicants.

Many of the children will have out-of-town guests present for the ceremonies.

On the following Tuesday morning the children will have their group picture taken, and they will be the guests of the first grade mothers at a social in the afternoon.
