Jazz at Episcopal Church Gathering Sets Off Debate

Norwalk, Conn.—(UPI)—A real cool Mass played by a hot jazz combo in a Protestant Episcopal church set off a debate today on whether it is proper to mix the Bible with the blues.

"A 20th Century Folk Mass," composed mainly in ragtime by an English clergyman, was played by a progressive jazz ensemble made up of a pianist, drummer, saxophonist and bass player Sunday at a Communion Mass at St. Paul's church in the heart of this community.

For nearly 90 minutes the rafters of the English Gothic church rang with the strains of foxtrots, beguines, blues and improvised versions of popular tunes. A record stand, located in some of the singing and swayed and tapped to catchy rhythms.

Priests in traditional vestments stood before a candle-lit altar and sang their regular chants with incense wafting about them. But much of the other ancient liturgy had been set to a jazz beat and the organ was silent while the combo played, often as accompaniment to the syncretic of the soloist and robed choir.

The Mass received a mixed reception from the record crowd of more than 500 persons who jammed a church usually attended by half that many.

The 12-man vestry appeared to be sharply divided both on the merits of the music and the propriety of syncretizing a service. Several vestrymen indicated displeasure over bringing jazz into the church, and said the matter would be discussed at their next monthly meeting.

An usher said he thought the Mass was marvelous. Officials of the National Council of Churches and the Protestant Episcopal church attended the service as "observers." They were all for jazz in church, but they agreed that this Mass was not up to their idea of American jazz standards. They thought the music was "corny."

Pianist Russ Martino, leader of the combo, director of the Stamford, Conn., High school band and organist in his own Roman Catholic church, said he did not care much for the music composed by Father Geoffrey Beaumont but that it was the only jazz Mass available.

The Rt. Rev. Walter Henry Gray, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Connecticut, maintained an official silence about the presentation.

"I know nothing about it," he said at his Hartford headquarters. "The music of a parish is under the direction of the pastor."

Milwaukee Police Seek Sex Deviate In Death of Boy

Milwaukee, Wis.—(UPI)—The entire Milwaukee detective force today was thrown into the search for a bushy-haired sex deviate who lured a 5-year-old boy into his car and strangled the youngster.

The body of little Ben Wagner was found Sunday in a ditch along a road overlooking Lake Michigan, south of Port Washington.

Police throughout the Midwest also were alerted for the killer, believed to be a young, bushy-haired man who sexually molested another boy Saturday.

Found By Newsboy Ben's body, with three stab wounds in the left chest and two in the left arm, was found by a newsboy making his rounds where the body had been tossed from a car.

Blood stained a bright red Milwaukee Brave's jacket worn by the boy. Police said the car probably had blood splattered upholstery.

Milton Geiger, 38, Milwaukee, said he pursued a 1955 or 1956 blue or blue-white station wagon for about three miles south on U. S. 141 when he noticed a boy frantically waving from the front seat.

The driver, a man, appeared to be the only other occupant of the vehicle, Geiger said. The incident occurred about 9 p.m. (e.s.t.) Saturday, about an hour and one-half after the boy was abducted while on his way with a companion to get an ice cream treat.

Coroner Dr. John Walsh of Port Washington, about 28 miles north of Milwaukee, said death was due to the stab wounds. He estimated death took place about 4 a.m., e.s.t., Sunday, about nine hours after the kidnaping.
