

Jackson County Cancer Unit Reviews Services to Patients

An expanding educational program during recent years has helped acquaint more Jackson county residents with facts about cancer, and the work being done by the American Cancer society, including the service program carried on locally, according to Dr. Robert Buck, president of the county unit. For the past 14 years, doctors have been able to advise cancer patients that dressings are available without cost, in any quantities needed and for as long a time as the need exists, he states. Service chairman for Jackson county is Mrs. Ray Frisbie, who has organized nine groups of women who meet at regular intervals to make dressings. Materials are furnished by the Cancer society, and are paid for from funds raised in the annual Cancer Crusade. Mrs. Frisbie adds that many of the dressings are made in particular sizes needed for specific patients, and are not available commercially. No charge is ever made for them, but families who are financially able and wish to do so, are asked to contribute to the Society. In most cases, she says, patients have already undergone surgery and families are unable to bear any further expense during prolonged treatment. Some patients with excessive drainage of wounds or hemorrhage may require several changes each day.

Lodge Confers Rank of Knight; Contest Slated

Many of the eye-appealing "extras" add to convenience and also to cost. Comparison of features and most of both gas and electric ranges, a discussion of separate and built-in units, wiring and safety are included in the booklet. Copies of "Ranges—What to Look For" are free on request from county extension offices in Oregon, Idaho and Washington.
