Chinese Philosopher Joins Presbyterian Church, N.Y.

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

On a wintry Sunday morning 16 months ago, a small, bespectacled man with oriental features was received into the membership of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church in New York.

No publicity was given to his conversion. Only the Rev. David Read, minister of the church, and a few others were aware that the new member was the distinguished Chinese philopsher, Dr. Lin Yutang.

Although Dr. Lin has many other claims to fame, he is best known to Americans as the author of "The Importance of Living." The volume is a witty exposition of Confucianist philosophy which has enjoyed tremendous popularity in this country since it was published in 1937.

What led this outspoken unbeliver to join the Christian church at the age of 62?

Dr. Linn answers in a brief but moving spirtual autobiography in a recent issue of Presbyterian Life magazine.

Throughout most of his adult life, he recalls, "my only religion was humanism: the belief in human reason and in man's power, lifting himself by his own bootstraps, to better himself and make a better world."

But gradually, "below the surface of my life, a disquiet began to set in.

"It was born both of reflection and experience. I saw that the fruit of the humanistic age of enlightment was an age of materialism. Man's increasing belief in himself as God did not seem to be making him more God-like. He was becoming more clever. But he had less and less of the sober, uplifting humility of one who has stood in the presence of God. Contemporary history seemed to indicate how dangerously near the savage state man may be even while he is most advanced technologically and materially."

Ultimately Dr. Lin arrived at the conviction that "humanity is not, and never has been, sufficient unto itself," and that "mankind cannot survive without religion."

Learns About Jesus

The next question he faced was: "Is there a satisfying religion for the modern, educated man?"

He first examined the great oriental religions, and found their anwsers inadequate. Then he turned to a study of "the awe-inspiring simplicity and beauty of the teachings of Jesus."

"I found that no one ever spoke like Jesus. He spoke of God the Father as one who knew him and was identified with him in the fullness of knowledge and love.

"It was astounding to learn that God, as Jesus revealed him, is so different from what men had thought him to be. There is a totally new order of love and compassion in Jesus' prayer from the cross, 'Father forgive them, for they know not what they do.'

"I saw why men have turned to Jesus, not merely in respect but in adoration. In him, the message of love and gentleness and compassion becomes incarnate."
