SPACEMAN PARTY FAVORS

Jane McHenry

If your gang or club plans a party this Spring, you can make funny spaceman favors from stacked paper cups topped with crepe-paper heads. Run a long pin through the bottom of a paper cup, through the head, and into a large cork which makes a good hat. Cup lids can be used too. Run a pin through the head, through the paper lid, and into a tiny cork for a different type of hat. Partially unbent paper clips can be pushed into the sides or top of the cork for weird outer-space antennae. Slide a pipe cleaner through small holes in the cup sides for arms, which you can bend any way you like. Eyes are gummed reinforcements stuck in place. With a nose and mouth added, your job is done.

There will be a lot of these odd newcomers about if you let your imagination go. First, see the drawings for a couple of basic spacemen.

SPIN AND WIN

Lois Williams Stein

From 8 to 20 players can play this game. All except one, who is IT, join hands and start moving around in a circle. IT stands inside the circle. He calls out, "Spin and Win!" The players drop hands and begin to spin round and round—but continue to move in a large circle, too.

In the center IT also spins around and tries to squeeze into a place in the outside ring. The others, alert, join hands quickly wherever he tries to enter. When IT finally does succeed, he calls out, "A Spinner Wins!" All stop in their tracks. Whoever is on the right of IT, steps into the center of the circle. He's IT and the next game begins.

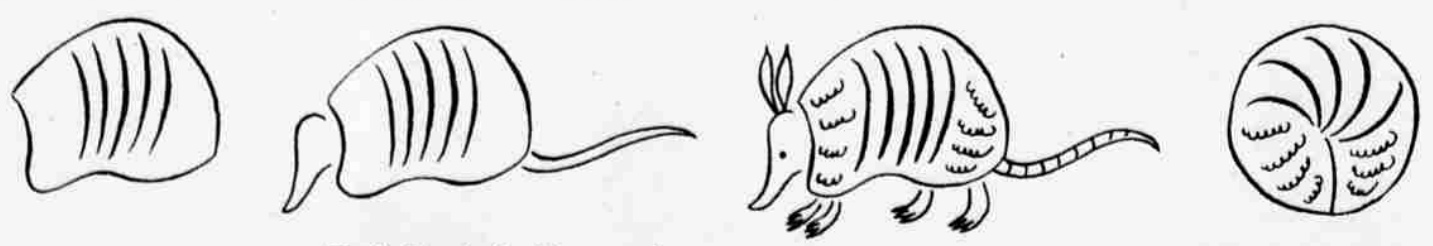
LET'S DRAW AN ARMADILLO

Ann Davidow



To begin an armadillo,
Draw a kind of crinkly pillow.

That's his shell of bone and scale,
Outside of which his head and tail

And feet are seen. So draw them all.
He rolls himself into a ball

To hide from those who'd like a treat
Of tasty armadillo meat.
