Nicosia — UPI — Rescue team members Tuesday hacked to pieces and blew up secret rocket equipment found in the wreckage of a British plane which crashed in Turkey 12 days ago.

Plastic explosives dropped to the six-man volunteer rescue team were used to demolish some of the equipment, which had been destined for Britain's Woomera rocket test range in Australia.

Help For Families in Distress

In my early years, when I used to make calls and go into homes — particularly of the poor — I was often impressed with a feeling of helplessness as I was faced with a poverty-stricken, run-down home in a small dirty house in a slum neighborhood — a house presided over by a husband who did not make enough money to support and feed a number of children. Perhaps another child was on its way and the mother was worn out and hopeless and apathetic.

Perhaps she had never had any training in home-making to begin with; the children were perhaps out-of-hand, and too much for her; and the unhappy husband, when he came home at night — tired out from his day's labor — either didn't know how to help his wife, or didn't care to try.

Perhaps when the wife got so tired and weak that she felt she never could get out of bed again, the husband asked me to see her. Then I felt absolutely helpless because, obviously, nothing that I could give her out of a bottle would cure the awful situation of the home. Even the giving of a lot of money to such people would not have done enough. Some good, wise woman would have had to go in and teach that wife how to be a better housekeeper. Someone would have had to arrange matters so that, for a while, she could get a rest, and some sleep. Perhaps she needed to spend three weeks in bed. Someone would have to take care of the children for a while.
