Major Contribution—The state superintendent reported that a major contribution by Jewett to high schools of Oregon was the development here of the first complete book rental system in the state. Such a system is

Ceremonies Honor Jewetts; Putnam Speaks of Superintendent's Career

Central Point—Howard P. Jewett, superintendent of School District 6, was described here Friday night as an "unusual individual," as an "outstanding administrator" and as a man who "stands high in the respect of his professional colleagues."

These depictions were voiced by Dr. Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction, who was principal speaker at a public gathering honoring Jewett and his wife. The two retire from their school posts on June 30.

Jewett has impressed associates as "one forever seeking further opportunities for youth, educationally speaking." Putnam also declared. He pointed out that Jewett, head of the school system here 37 years, has served as a district superintendent longer than any other person in the state in a comparable district, so far as can be determined. Mrs. Jewett has taught second grade classes here 14 years.

Many Graduates—Several hundred people, including former students of the district, faculty members past and present and other friends of the Jewetts, were on hand for the program in the Crater High school gymnasium.

A large proportion of those attending were graduates of former Central Point high school and present Crater high. Every graduating class during Jewett's long administration, those of 1923 through 1959, were represented. Some alumni came from distant points.

The program included selections by the Crater band and chorus and dance groups. C. Norman Gail, school board chairman, presented a plaque to Jewett and four pieces of luggage to the superintendent and his wife. He also handed them a large check as a travel fund for a trip around the United States.

The gifts were made possible by contributions from former students and other friends of the Jewetts.

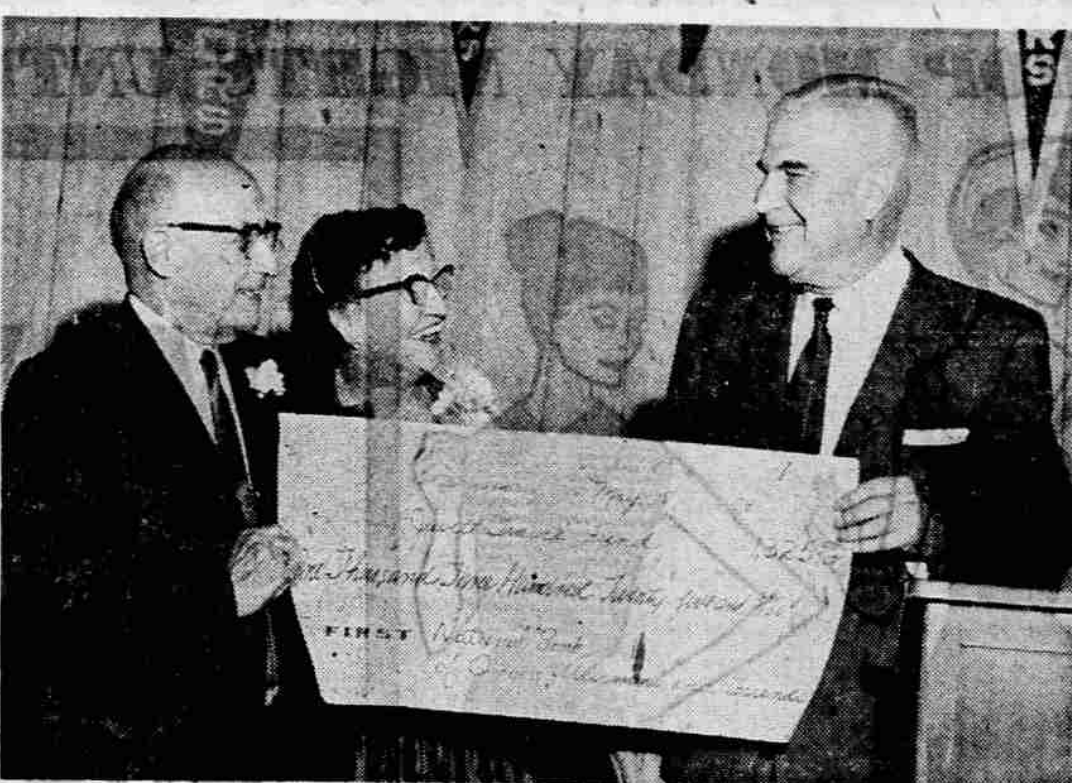

Responses of Thanks—Responses of thanks and appreciation were made by both Superintendent and Mrs. Jewett. C. A. Meyer, Central Point Junior High school principal, was master of ceremonies.

"Widening the doors" has been Jewett's philosophy through his professional life, Putnam told the audience. He spoke on Jewett's effort to give children greater educational opportunities for richer lives. The state official said that Jewett has been active with fellow administrators in constantly striving to improve the educational program in the entire state.

Putnam stated that the District 6 administrator, who has been a teacher, principal and superintendent "in a long and distinguished career," has "had vision to look beyond the years."

James Grimes, class of 1938, here from Bierut, Lebanon, was the alumnus from the most distant point.

Refreshments—Members of the four Parent-Teacher associations of the district served refreshments after the program. An alumni potluck dinner

RETIREMENT GIFT—Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Jewett, Central Point, show their happiness as they discuss travel fund gift with Dr. Rex Putnam, right, state superintendent of public instruction. Jewett has been superintendent of School District 6 for 37 years. Mrs. Jewett has taught second grade classes for 13 years at Central Point. They retire in June. The huge check is the result of contributions from Crater High school and former Central Point High school alumni and friends. The money will be used for travel around the United States. Presentation was made at a program honoring the Jewetts at Crater High Friday night. Putnam was main speaker. Friday and Saturday were "Jewett Days" in the school district.

now in effect in almost every high school in Oregon, Putnam said.

Putnam mentioned Jewett's three years on a state committee for curricula improvement, two years on a state committee which started custodian training and three years on a state group which developed standards and procedures for elementary school athletes.

The Friday gathering also was described by Putnam as a symbol of "the respect and appreciation of this community."

Accomplishments—Jewett, in his acknowledgment and expressions of thanks declared that what has been accomplished in his years here has largely resulted from the type of members the residents of the district have put on the school board.

He pointed out that accomplishments will continue as long as the district keeps on electing the type of men who are interested in children and have no personal axes to grind. He said that the boards have set the policy and then given him support.

The Crater chorus honored Jewett by putting their own words to the Meredith Wilson tune, "The School Man."

The gymnasium was decorated with the pennants of Central Point high classes. There was a traditional sign which read: "Welcome Grads," and another said: "Horse Power Jewett," reviving a nickname given him in his early years here.

James Grimes, class of 1938, here from Bierut, Lebanon, was the alumnus from the most distant point.

Refreshments—Members of the four Parent-Teacher associations of the district served refreshments after the program. An alumni potluck dinner with special entertainment was held yesterday noon at the high school. An informal gathering last night was in the junior high library. The room was formerly the study hall for old Central Point high.

On Friday Jewett was guest at assemblies in schools in the district. A junior high school track meet Friday and a senior high meet on Saturday were among other activities of "Jewett Days."

Programs also were presented at Hanby school in Gold Hill and the Sams Valley school.

Gail, chairman of the board of district 6C, was master of ceremonies at Hanby school. The program included selections by the advanced Hanby school band directed by Charles Cook, instructor, and other groups from both Hanby and Patrick schools.

Twenty-six students from Patrick school made up the rhythm band directed by Glenn Wade, second grade student; and Donald Sizemore, third grade pupil, presented the third grade class, which provided three numbers and a special song composed by Bobby Boye, soloist for the group.

Other selections were provided by the Singsters, directed by Mrs. Ruth Brewster, vocal teacher; the Harmonets, an ensemble made up of sixth, seventh and eighth grade Hanby students; and the Sextette vocal group.

Jewett was presented a leather diploma making him a "doctor of educational diplomacy" by Dave Force, seventh grade student.

"Passing of time" was the theme for the Sams Valley program, which included several songs by pupils of the first and second grades under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Mack. Also participating in the program were Vicki Sanderson, second grade student; John Dean, who arranged a number, "Time Marches On"; Delores Sanderson, Howard Sollinger and Jeannine Conroy, who related their remembrances of Jewett.

Anita Shope and Jeanette King read a poem written by Anita Shope, and the combined chorus sang several selections.

Road Painters Die After Blast

Spokane-UPD—Two highway department employees died six hours apart in a local hospital Friday night and yesterday after suffering severe burns when a paint tank exploded along the freeway exit of here Friday afternoon.

Hospital attendants said George Mullfing, 67, of Spokane, died shortly before midnight Friday. A partner on the truck that was painting a centerline along the freeway, Francis E. Baker, 42, died at 5 p.m. yesterday.

Eyewitnesses said the men were turned into human torches when the tank being carried on the open bed of the truck exploded.

Mullfing had been setting warning cones and Baker was running the paint sprayer at the time of the accident. Highway department officials said the explosion apparently was caused by a malfunctioning safety valve which failed to relieve pressure on the tank.

Mother's Day

We have set up for saints and heroes. For martyrs of brain and blood. Who've swept thru the changing channels Of Time in a master-flood. Our days of high sung remembrance. Fair-hymned with heart-uttered praise. And left for the last—which shall yet be first—The highest of all high-days.

And now, with our laurel-list crowded With minions and masters of fame We see how its head lacks the luster Of earth's Unapproachable Name! The first of all names we remember. The last of all names that we love... That lives in the heart of each human. All other names gleaming above!

She has stood undismayed where the bravest Of men would but falter and faint. She has fought thru all nights of disaster. Unfearful of peril or pain. She has striven and stumbled, and suffered All sorrow, all pain, and all woe. And still in her heart kept the comfort, And still in her eyes the good glow!

Though all days be hers to the loving, Let one day be all hers alone. That the world in its restless onrushing May stop to kneel down at her throne. And back of the flower emblematic That the world in her honor shall wear, Let there rise for the Blessing of Mother A boundless Thanksgiving of prayer!
