Pearls Enhance Female Face Declares Expert on Jewels

By GAY PAULEY UPI Women's Editor

New York (UPI)—Diamonds, to some a girl's best friend, are just so much price tag to Mrs. Felicia Canova. She's a pearl girl - one of the few women pearl importers in the United States.

"Diamonds have no personality," said Mrs. Canova, although she is aware most of us women don't worry about that fact. "Only price tag. They are cold... why do you think they're referred to as 'ice'? Pearls have warmth; they light up a woman's face."

Mrs. Canova's business is cultured pearls, which she contends are different only in cost from those the oyster produces without man-made irritation.

"The same size and type of genuine pearl, however, will cost 50 times as much as the cultured," she said. "Some genuine pearl necklaces go for as much as $50,000. You can buy a cultured one for $200 to $5,000, depending on the quality of the pearls, the size, and number of strands." King Of Pearls. French-born Mrs. Canova, mother of two sons - one a writer and the other a mathematician, became an expert in pearls by first being an expert secretary. Coming to the United States after World War II, she worked for Leonard Rosenthal, a millionaire dealer generally dubbed the "King of Pearls."

was a baroque weighing 1860 grains. Mrs. Canova isn't sure who owns it now. In all parts of the world, she said, pearls are associated with brides "probably because pearls enhance." And, to some people, the pearl "symbolizes tears," but Mrs. Canova isn't superstitious.

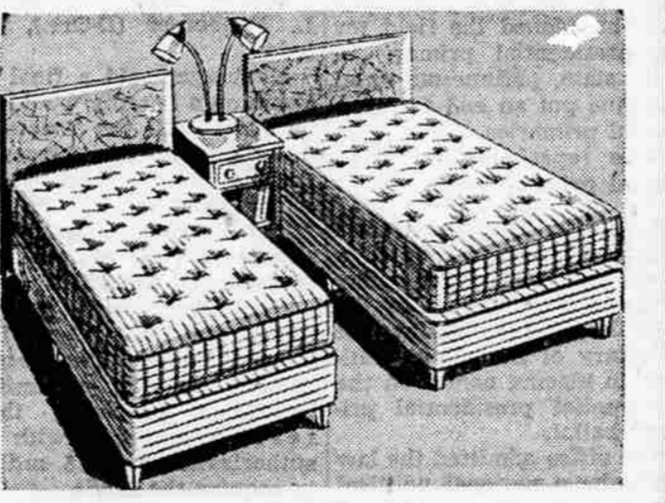

Her own favorite necklace is a 24-inch single strand of cultured pearls, given her by the widow of her employer. A woman should select the tone of pearls to go with her complexion and hair color, she said. By types, here are the most becoming colors: Blonde with blue eyes - white pearls; Red hair with fair skin - white with either a rose or very pale green tint; Dark hair with fair skin - white with rose tint; Dark hair with hair skin-cream or rose tint.

When he died in 1955, she opened her own business. I learned of Mrs. Canova in a roundabout fashion - Japan air lines called to say she had booked her first flight to the orient, center of cultured pearls breeding, and was their 100,000th trans-pacific passenger.

Later, in an interview, Mrs. Canova talked of some of the lore associated with pearls. Cleopatra Wore Them. Cleopatra was one of the famous beauties to wear them. Ancient Persian medals representing queens show the royal ladies with pearls in their ears. Persians also used pearls on their shoes, and as necklaces and earrings. Greek women adorned themselves with pearls before sleeping, in order to possess them in their dreams. The largest pearl in the world was in the Hope collection - it
