You and Your Pet

(Prepared under the auspices of the Southern Oregon Humane Society)

An invaluable service.

They stroll in and out of high ranking commanding officers' quarters without so much as a "by your leave." They sit in councils of war and hear plans for an inkling of which the enemy would barter an Army Corps or a battleship. In the brief hours of leisure, which our Army and Navy leaders enjoy, these "civilians" are their closest companions, even sharing their solitary meals with them.

Yes, these pals closely guard the secrets entrusted to them and have never been known to betray a confidence. Besides this, they deserve the wholehearted thanks of their country, because they perform an invaluable service in keeping up the morale of the men on whom victory depends.

Favored Friends

These highly favored friends –indispensable because no one else could possibly take their places–are dogs, the beloved pets of our military and naval chieftains.

How important they are was proved by the words of General Eisenhower himself. During an inspection tour of the United States camps in England, prior to the Normandy invasion, he saw many dogs frisking about. He wanted to stop and pet them all, but military formality forbade. However, when he got back to his headquarters, he said to one of his aides: "I want a dog. I need somebody to talk to and I want somebody who can't ask questions about the war and can't repeat what I say, if I say anything."

The aide went out and bought a black Scottie pup. He crept right into Ike's heart the moment he laid eyes on him. Since then Telek, as the General named him, has gone wherever the General goes.

Share Enthusiasm

Most other Generals share Eisenhower's enthusiasm for dogs. Lt. General Omar N. Bradley, Lt. General George S. Patton Jr., Gen. Joseph Stillwell, Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chenault, Maj. Gen. Elwood Quesada are only a few who would feel lonely indeed if deprived of their pets.

It's the other side of the dog. The inside, if you please, rather than the outside. It's the side seen by his friends who forget his external appearance, the color of his coat, the lines that tell of pedigree and breeding.

To them he is a living thing that loves and answers to those who love him with a devotion and a fidelity that make friendship possible.

"Exterminate them!" say some–all the curs that never ought to have been born. If you are going to have dogs let them be the aristocrats of dogdom whose lineage you can trace. Some of the noblest of the canine race have sprung from parents as lowly as want and poverty and lack of fame could make them.

There are "curs" on one street that you could trust for their good temper, their loyalty and unselfishness to an extent that would make a multitude of your human kind seem like savages beside them.

Human Joe.

The award to be made on the basis of the total return to the United States under the terms of the bid.
