Back Stairs: Administration Villain

By MERRIAM SMITH
UPI White House Reporter
Washington—UPI—Back stairs at the White House: Jim Hagerly, President Eisenhower's press secretary, may end up as a deep-dyed villain of this administration if he continues to attract attention of passing magazine writers whose knowledge of the White House tends to be third or fourth hand.

Jim currently is a pretty dangerous fellow in Esquire magazine. Esquire flogs old Jim with vigor, but its whip seems to break repeatedly. Without doubt, Hagerly has his faults and drawbacks but the magazine makes the whole thing a bit ridiculous by calling him "dangerous."

Esquire tells about "a top Washington analyst"—presumably news and not psychiatric—who tried manfully for a month during the 1958 recession to get to see White House officials who were mapping the administration's economic moves. Poor fellow, according to the magazine, ran afoul of a black and evil wall of silence Hagerly threw around his staff.

who told Congress that $25 billion has been poured into a "fortress America" air defense network that soon will be obsolete as the French Maginot Line.

Esquire claims its piece about Hagerly is the "top untold story out of Washington." It may be right.

Wall Street Chatter

New York—UPI—The fact that god news brings immediate strength to a broad segment of stocks indicates there is still basic firmness to the market, according to the Fitch Survey.

interest was concentrated elsewhere, have edged upward with increased volume. Hence, it says, it seems wise to confine new purchases to stocks which fit this description, provided there is a good earnings outlook for them.

Hayward said the present air defense system didn't provide enough warning time to deter an enemy attack. Modern missile technology soon will outdate such a fixed warning and defense system he said.

For example, it rips aside the curtain of secrecy covering a clever Hagerly maneuver of keeping reporters around him happy by making sure that typewriters and telephones are available when the President is on the road.
