

Taste of Statehood Has Hawaii Growing; Cities Being Created

Honolulu (UPI)—The taste of statehood has Hawaii drooping at the prospect of what it can do to its cities. Even creating new ones.

There is, for instance, Henry Kaiser's announcement that he will build a $300-million model city for 50,000 people at the southeastern tip of Oahu.

The project will have the aid and blessing of the Bishop Estate, one of the island's largest landholders, and the entire development—covering 6,000 acres—will be on leasehold land.

To Transform Hills
To be called Hawaii-Kai, the city to be built—according to the plans—transform barren hills and swampy lowland into a vision of loveliness. The area will have "everything"—hotels, apartments, homes, service areas, plus a huge man-made beach and a sea-water lake that is currently a muddy fish-pond.

The James Campbell Estate, another big land-holder, has already started building its own new city at the other end of the island of Oahu. Envisioned several years ago, the Campbell project got off the ground last year when Standard Oil of California announced it would put a $50-million refinery in the industrial park planned for the area.

Once Standard Oil was in, other firms began to lease property in the industrial tract. An assortment of heavy industries is now scheduled for the area, and around it are springing up the houses, the schools and the supermarkets that will serve the people who work in a section that was once a sugar-cane field.

Land—any land—on Oahu is considered a gold-mine. Much of it is held in lease by the large estates, but some of it, like the site of the new Ala Moana Shopping Center, was created by the owners.

Biggest Shopping Center
Ala Moana to islanders today means the biggest shopping center they've ever seen. Due to open in August, the $12-million center spreads itself over 50 acres of land patiently created with coral fills over the years by tycoon Walter Dillingham.

The shopping center is the king of Hawaii's shopping areas, but it is by no means the only one. With every new residential development, there are more stores on the land to serve the people. Economists predict that the construction industry may bring in a billion dollars by 1965.

Islands Growing
Most of the building is in and around Honolulu on the island of Oahu. But the other islands are beginning to show signs of growth, too. One large island firm has announced plans for a luxury beach development on the island of Maui to rival famed Waikiki.

Only legal details are holding up the start of this project. Before long, $36 million will be poured into the area, which is expected to have 11 hotels. The name of the area is Kaaanapali. Remember it; someday it may be as famous as Waikiki.

Workers Rushing To Complete Job For Centennial Opening

By HARRY CHIPMAN
Mail Tribune Staff Writer

It will come as quite a surprise to me if the Oregon Centennial Exposition is 100 per cent completed when the rockets and 100-gun salute are fired at noon Wednesday to officially open Oregon's 100th birthday party in Portland.

However, Centennial officials with whom I talked assured me that everything would be ready when the big gates swing open for the 100-day celebration.

Everything with which the Centennial Commission is responsible is completed but many of the commercial exhibits are still in various stages of construction. For instance, Saturday only the framework of the Japanese exhibit was up. The Ghana exhibit was in various stages of painting and in some other exhibits, merchandise was being unpacked as carpenters and painters worked frantically.

My guide said workers are going around the clock and on Sunday in an effort to have everything in readiness. Considerable asphalt is yet to be laid in several parts of the grounds and an immense job of cleaning up remains.

Every corner of the vast grounds was a beehive of activity. The Frontier Town construction was complete and merchandise and exhibits were being placed in the several pioneer-type stores. The forestry building, perhaps the most unique in its modern architectural construction, is complete and displays were being placed. Next to the forestry building is a group of logs standing erect which the guide said would give the impression of walking through a dense forest when completed.

Many of the county exhibits were yet to be completed. A beautiful panoramic topographic scene of Oregon mountains, lakes, rivers and lowlands graces one wall of one of the big rooms and is certain to attract much interest.

Pipe Being Laid
The nine miles of pipe necessary to freeze ice for the Ice Capades, which opens a two-week run on June 11, was being placed in the huge arena and all seats for the show were in place. The big stage on which other shows will perform during the 100-day run has been constructed, put into place for trial use, and then removed for the Ice Capades.

The Cameo Home of Ideas created considerable interest among our group with its many ideas of how the home of tomorrow will look, things which the present-day home-builder probably wouldn't consider in his construction plans.

The International Garden of Tomorrow has been planted and was largely blocked from view by a fence. The entrance was made too muddy by the rain which fell during our tour but the guide said it will be black-topped before opening day. The Hall of Religious History has been completed and the wildlife display was undergoing its final touches.

Centennial personnel recommended visitors allow at least three days to properly tour the grounds and see the many exhibits.

"Be sure to tell your women to wear walking shoes," one of the officials told our group.

Morse Pleased Over Youth Bill

Washington - Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) has expressed pleasure over action of the special Senate labor subcommittee in reporting S. 812, the Youth Conservation bill, to the full committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

The only major change in the bill, of which Morse was a cosponsor, is the placing of responsibility for the YCC in the department of labor rather than the department of health, education and welfare.

The bill would establish in the department of labor a Youth Conservation Corps similar to the CCC of the New Deal era. Morse said the health and well being of American youth, which is America's greatest asset, would derive great benefit from a Youth Conservation Corps. He declared the Corps would be of considerable aid to the Forest Service and similar agencies in conservation of natural resources and increased use of recreational areas, that the Corps would help states and counties through better federal management of adjacent holdings, and that the Treasury would receive increased revenue through the construction of access roads and increased timber sales.

Toy Cars Cannot Legally Be Driven on Highways

Salem—Small gasoline-powered vehicles cannot legally be driven on public streets or roads, The Oregon Traffic Safety Commission has reminded owners or prospective buyers.

The commission said that use of the midget vehicle in any location other than on private property not only is in violation of law, but also represents a potentially dangerous situation. As an example, the toy cars are so low they are difficult for a driver in a standard car to see.

The pint-sized vehicles cannot be licensed to operate on public streets because they lack much of the equipment required for operation as a motor vehicle. Even if they had the required equipment, the operator still would have to be 16 years of age and be a licensed driver in the state, the commission commented.

Safety Measures
New York - (UPI) - City officials took steps Friday to prevent additional suffocation of children from plastic bags. Health inspectors visited more than 2,000 cleaning establishments urging that warning labels be placed on plastic bags, which are commonly used to cover clothing.

Work Resumes Despite Pickets

Independence (UPI) - Work was resumed at the Valley Concrete Co. plant here Friday, despite pickets in front of the establishment.

Several mid-Willamette valley plants have been idled since last month by a Teamsters union strike and subsequent lockout by employers who said a strike against one was a strike against all. First plant struck was in Corvallis. While industry officials declined to be quoted, one plant manager predicted 10 of 11 mid-Willamette plants will be back in operation Monday.

When work resumed here, supervisory personnel drove the trucks. A plant spokesman said resumption of work was prompted by community pressure. The concrete from the independent plant went to Imply Corp.'s new plywood plant here, and the spokesman said the work stoppage had thrown several hundred men out of work at the plywood plant project.

Letters were sent to workers urging them to report back to their jobs at the same pay scales. A management spokesman said any jobs vacant after Monday would be filled with non-union help.

Kootenai River Hits Flood Stage

Bonners Ferry, Idaho (UPI) - The Kootenai river climber to the official flood stage of 31.2 feet yesterday and continued to rise as warm weather melted the mountain snowpack.

The reading was up 2.1 feet from Friday. River forecasters said nearby farmlands were protected by dikes which could withstand a level of 34.5 feet.

The town itself, threatened annually by the river's spring rampage, is set off by dikes which can hold back a level of about 37 feet.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY
Wichita, Kan. (UPI) - Don Clemons left a night club party for home Friday, but wound up delaying a B52 bomber in landing at McConnell Air Force Base. He said he mistook a runway for the Kansas Turnpike.
