Northern States Get High Winds
By United Press International
A storm belt expected to bring relief from the season's first heat wave in central sections of the nation brought high winds and reported tornado funnels to some northern areas.

Rain, hail and winds of tornado force caused heavy property damage in Fargo, N.D., and Moorhead, Minn., Tuesday night. Winds at Fargo measured up to 115 miles an hour and tornado funnels were spotted in the area.

No injuries were reported but 10 airplanes were damaged at the Fargo airport and countless windows were smashed by hail.
