

Polio Booster Shot Suggested

Chicago (Science Service)—An annual booster shot of polio vaccine, and possibly two such shots, has been recommended by a research team at Michael Reese hospital here.

A five-year study involving 4,000 children who had received a Salk-type polio vaccine showed that within one to three years after getting their first three shots the levels of immunity drop.

After a booster, however, the immunity levels reached a higher level and fell less than after the primary immunization. After a second booster "there was even better response," the researchers report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

It seems possible, they explained, that once the polio antibodies, or polio virus fighters, are produced, they will be present within the body at very low levels for life. Actual virus exposure or booster shots will "reminde" the body to produce more of these virus fighters.

Thus, persons who have once shown antibodies is probably still immune. However, it is preferable to have a detectable amount of antibodies present in the blood stream and the booster shot helps provide them, the team said.

Oregon Delegation Has Little Sympathy for Labor Bill Foes

By A. ROBERT SMITH

Washington (Special) — Oregon members of Congress are showing little sympathy for the harsh criticism of certain labor leaders aimed at the Kennedy-Ervin labor reform bill.

Most of them hold the view that labor officials ought to get behind a move to adopt reform legislation this year because the public demands such action from Congress.

A number of Oregon labor officials have been to Washington recently calling on the state's congressional delegation. Among them was Clyde Crosby, international organizer for the Teamsters in Oregon, who was urging a string of amendments which some lawmakers concluded would practically rewrite the bill.

The Kennedy bill passed the Senate by a vote of 90 to 1. Teamsters are giving Sen. Wayne Morse credit for having successfully added a number of their amendments to the bill on the Senate floor, but these were only minor procedural amendments.

The bill is now before the House Labor Committee, of which Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) is a member.

"I do not agree with labor leaders who oppose this legislation," she said. "I think they are short-sighted, and I've told them if no bill is passed to take care of abuses on part of a small handful of labor officials and employers, I think the next Congress will pass a bill that will make the Taft-Hartley bill look like good clean fun." Mrs. Green singled out Teamster President James R. Hoffa, saying she regarded his threat of a national general strike as "an outrage." She said she has "many friends in the labor movement, and this does not express their sentiments," referring to Hoffa's remarks. Mrs. Green said she would prefer the bill as it emerged from the Senate Labor Committee before a "bill of rights" was added, during floor debate. She said she thought some procedural amendments were in order, but that the Kennedy bill is a "reasonable bill." She said she opposes a long list of amendments being promoted by the Teamsters.

Porter Sees Duty
Rep. Charles O. Porter (D-Ore.) said "we have a duty to put through a law that will aid honest labor members against dishonest, unscrupulous officials."

But he said the "problem is to allow union members to air their grievances without paralyzing the union, because you will always have some soreheads who don't like the way things are going." Porter was critical of the AFL-CIO for initially attacking the Senate-passed bill, rather than taking a positive stand in favor of some reform legislation.

Sen. Richard N. Neuberger took a similar stand in a Senate speech, deploring "nit picking" or "frivolous objections" being raised by labor. "During the 1920s and 1930s, such ruthless utility magnates as Insull and others objected violently to any government regulation, no matter how moderate," Neuberger observed. "As a result, they got a type of regulation which utility executives have been complaining about ever since. In my estimation, no unionist of honesty or a fundamental belief in democracy need fear the Kennedy-Ervin bill as passed by the Senate. I trust the House, likewise, will enact the bill."

Rep. Al Ullman agreed that Congress must pass some kind of bill and that the AFL-CIO is "going to have to take a labor bill." But he said he didn't want any "anti-labor bill," only legislation to "put more democracy in the unions and clean them up."

Sauvies Farmers Threaten Lawsuit

Portland (UPI)—A group of angry Sauvies island farmers said Wednesday that a dike protecting their property was damaged extensively Tuesday when a group of Canadian "Corvettes" headed up the Columbia river and left destructive waves in their wake. They threatened a lawsuit.

The five farmers claimed the Canadian vessels steamed past the north end of the island at excessive speed. The Columbia river currently is at its highest mark of the year because of the spring runoff.

The farmers said the water washed away much of a 2,600-foot rock revetment on the river side of the levee and ate into 20 to 25 feet of the slope in places.
