

Three Valley Women Chosen For State Auxiliary Offices

Three Rogue valley members of Lions' auxiliaries were named to district and state offices at the annual convention of Oregon Lions and Lady Lions which closed in Portland yesterday.

Mrs. Frank Christian, Talent, was named vice-president of the Oregon auxiliary. She formerly was chairman of District E. Mrs. Dan Dwyer, member of Crater Lions' auxiliary, was elected to replace Mrs. Christian, and Mrs. Lee Mellish, member of Medford Lions' auxiliary, was named state historian.

All three women attended the state session. The assignment of the state vice-president in the Oregon Lions' auxiliary is chairman of projects. Main project for the state is aid to blind children, and of this the most important sub-project is the annual pre-school institute for parents of blind children. During this institute, held at the Oregon School for the Blind each June, the parents are trained for the special care which their sightless children need.

Mrs. Christian was in Salem recently to help with this year's institute, and will begin at once to plan for the 1960 session.

Mrs. Esten B. Humphrey wrote the dialogue for the program which was directed by Mrs. Herbert E. Seitz, past president of the auxiliary.

Dziarmaga, president; Mrs. Anthony Cappello, vice president; Mrs. J. A. Dollarhide, secretary; Mrs. E. E. Setzler, treasurer. Each officer was presented with a corsage at time of installation and the retiring president, Mrs. Seitz, received a past-president's pin.

Projects mentioned included opening and closing of Lake Echo in the Woods, making eye examinations and glasses available to needy children, cash donation to the Rogue Valley Memorial hospital, the placing of markers at historical sites in Jackson county, and various other civic projects.

Mr. Ruhl received the coveted award of "Lion of the Year," which was presented by Joseph Patella of the selection committee. Mr. Dollarhide was committee chairman for dinner arrangements.

Friends Honor Gold Hill Woman

Gold Hill—Four childhood friends of Mrs. Harriett Elliott came from a distance to celebrate her 73rd birthday anniversary. They arrived June 11 and remained as her guests until June 15.

Mrs. Elliott, a well known Gold Hill resident, was born June 10, 1886 on a homestead near Fowler, in Meade county, Kansas, the daughter of pioneer parents. She came to Gold Hill to reside after her retirement as a registered nurse in California and Kansas. She is an active worker in the Gold Hill Community Methodist church, and the Woman's Society of the church.

Coming from Fowler, Kan., for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haywood, retired wheat farmers, who hadn't seen Mrs. Elliott for nearly 40 years. Also here were the Rev. and Mrs. Paul Younger, also childhood friends whom Mrs. Elliott had visited frequently at their home in Garden Grove, Calif. He is a retired minister of the Friends church.

Prior to their arrival in southern Oregon, the Youngers had gone to Kansas from their home in California by train, and joined the Haywoods for a trip by automobile to Canada. En route to Yellowstone National Park, they saw the Oregon Centennial caravan coming through Nebraska.

While the visitors were here Mrs. Elliott accompanied them to Crater Lake and on scenic drives in Jackson county. They visited the Jacksonville Museum and two mills, one in the White City area and the other in Medford.

June 10, Mrs. Elliott was honored at a party given on the lawn at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Donald Meister, in Gold Hill. A decorated cake was served. Present were Miss Terry Turner, her brother, Bobby, Mike and Randy Turner, Kelly Meister, and Miss Leslie Meister, Nancy Meister and Earl Meister, all of Gold Hill.

No Designers Being Trained Says Cassini

New York—UPI—Designer Oleg Cassini has posed a serious question: What is being done to encourage, train and promote young American designers? Although the fashion industry is the fourth largest in the United States, it is not "facing up to its responsibilities of supplying fresh blood," Cassini said in a newsletter.

A sleepwear firm has designed a new waistband that eliminates uncomfortable bunching about the middle. The band is self-adjusting, and smooth fitting, and is used in all the firm's pajama lines.

Dress Manufacturer Tells Likes, Dislikes of Women

By GAY PAULEY UPI Women's Editor

New York—UPI—A man who sells us females $40 million in dresses each year has made a list of the loves, hates and doubts which color our clothes buying.

We have plenty of all three, said Sidney Blauner, the bluff, Gay Pauley specs-wearing head of Suzy Perette. Blauner said that mass production of fashion has taught him, for instance, that women like dresses with back zippers, even if they sometimes get stuck. But we loathe backless dresses, no matter how cool they may be on a scorching day.

He said the back-zipper proved itself this spring when a cape-colored dress of white and navy dotted silk surah failed to click—although he figured it as a natural best seller.

Designer Evelyn Simpson told him the back zipper had been ruled out, so that the big collar need not be split. Zipper Brings Sales

"That's what's wrong," said the manufacturer. "Split the collar and put a zipper up the back." He said he sold 100,000 of the model.

From his visits to the stores, Blauner has compiled these reactions of women to certain styles.

In addition to the back zipper, she loves: Dresses with three-quarter length sleeves; full skirts with or without petticoats and with the fullness massed at the sides; V-necklines, small round collars, and plunging necklines; Cummerbund waists and curved belts; shirtwaists for day, afternoon and evening; roses, sequins and jeweled buttons; pink, red, and black-and-white; anything trimmed with mink or leopard; and buttoned-in touches of white. Dislikes

We distrust: Purple, green and off-white colors; Dolman sleeves and very bloused tops; reversible clothes; off-shoulder necklines; wraparound skirts; clothes which both zip and button; skirts with front and back panels; balloon sleeves for daytime uncomfortable under a coat; wrap and the sashes or necklines; and big blanket plaids.

We loathe: Sleeveless dresses except for sultry days; side-fastened dresses; small buttons with loop button-holes; many women also write me to complain about button-holes cut on the vertical instead of the horizontal which gives a better hold on the button;

Horizontal stripes; uneven hemlines; suit-yourself waistlines (Blauner said a woman wanted the waistline defined by belt or cummerbund); skirts too tight for easy walking; thick tweeds in one-piece dresses; turtle necklines; and dresses cut low in back.

It takes a mighty pretty back to take a lot of exposure.

High-fashion colors and styles, formerly taboo in children's shoes, have turned up in small-fry styles, says manufacturer Herbert Posner. The "stiletto toe" influence has led to tapered toes for youngsters. A new swivel strap makes shoes look and fit like Mother's strapless pumps. For boys, the "Continental look" has inspired tapered toes and slim shoes, Posner added. Little girl's shoes have taken to high-fashion colors, and boys' shoes to black. The collegiate influence has given the pre-school set such shoes as white buck, grey buck and Loden green buck with crepe rubber soles.

Bright is the word for summer cottons for jumpers, reports the National Cotton Council. Flowers are applied to balloon-skirted dresses, stripes are set diagonally against each other and trim the hems of solid color dresses. Embroidery is everywhere—on sleeves, backs, shoulder straps, necks and hems.

Jackie Kennedy Gives Advice To Other Wives

Seattle—UPI—"Travel light and be prepared for anything."

Pretty, dark-haired Mrs. John E. (Jackie) Kennedy, wife of Massachusetts' Democratic senator, offered this advice Friday to wives of other "undecided" potential presidential candidates.

The Kennedys arrived in Seattle to begin a three-day, hand-shaking tour of Washington State. The senator was the featured speaker at a $25 plate Jackson-Jefferson Day dinner Saturday.

Not Official Although Kennedy isn't officially a candidate for anything, many Democrats consider him a good possibility for the 1960 presidential nomination.

What Mrs. Kennedy thinks, nobody knows. During the senator's press conference, she sat by his side, hands folded in her lap. She seldom smiled or looked up as he answered questions.

Meets Press Later, she met the press on her own, in a dimly lighted hotel lobby. The senator didn't go to his wife's conference—it wasn't as large as his, anyway.

"Better than a double bill," one veteran party member said. While commenting only, "you ask him," in regard to questions about Kennedy's presidential aspirations, Mrs. Kennedy was enthusiastic about the joys of being a politician's wife.

"The best life in the world," she said. "You get to be with your husband more than in any other kind of work." The Kennedys' daughter, Caroline, is with grandparents.

Lots of Cousins "I've gone with him on every trip. Besides his parents to baby-sit, he has so many cousins," she added gratefully.

"The biggest chore a politician's wife has, is common to all wives—see that your husband takes care of himself," she said. While Mrs. Kennedy didn't say it, she neatly demonstrated the absolute "must" for the politician's wife—don't talk politics.
