The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Clinic

The Right To Die
Recently, I was much interested in a statement of the Rev. Dr. Carlyle Adams, of Rensselaer, N. Y., who reportedly said, "It is just as wrong to keep a dying patient alive by extraordinary medical means as it is to let him die."

Dr. Alvarez spoke feelingly because, some time ago when his father had a bad stroke, the doctors with great effort succeeded in prolonging the old man's suffering. They kept him alive by intravenous feedings and the giving of oxygen. Dr. Adams, in talking to a group of physicians, said that he felt that a man should have a right to die with dignity when the Good Lord seemed to be sending for him. The minister was grateful to his family doctor when, on request, he put a stop to the strenuous efforts being made to keep his father alive a few more days or weeks.

In the discussion, the Rev. Edward L. O'Malley, Roman Catholic chaplain of Brady Hospital, in Albany, agreed, and said — according to the newspaper account — "You have an obligation to use ordinary medical means to prolong life when death approaches, but there is no obligation on you to use extraordinary means."

As many thoughtful persons have written me in the last few years, when their loved parent was obviously dying after a terrible stroke, or with a badly scattered cancer, and when nothing useful could be accomplished by prolonging the agony, they had done as the Rev. Dr. Adams had done, and had asked the doctors to order only good nursing and drugs to relieve pain. Every single one of the many people who, in recent years have written to me about this problem have agreed that every man or woman should have the right to die in peace. Many of my correspondents have begged me to try to influence the medical profession to think about this matter, and perhaps to change their old unthinking code of behavior.

The following poem by Ruth L. Card of Wellesley, expresses perfectly the wondering of the aging person as to his way of going. Will it be quick or slow? Will he have warning or will he not, and will his doctors insist on keeping him alive and in pain long after he has wanted to go? I recommend it to my readers.

My Soul Will Be Impatient
How will it come — that moment when the thread That we call life breaks and the soul is free? Will I have time to feel it straining taut, And think, "well, this is it!" And can I say A word of resignation and of faith? Will it snap suddenly, with only time For one quick, startled moment of surprise? Or slowly — with a peaceful, long-drawn breath, Then gone? Until that time, I cannot know. I can face all of these, but would be spared The torturing death that science has devised,
