

Louis Armstrong Arrives in Rome

Rome - (UPI) - American jazz trumpeter Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong arrived here today from Spoleto, where he suffered an attack of pneumonia, and said he wanted to visit St. Peter's Basilica "to thank the good Lord for being so good to me."

Armstrong's physician, Dr. Alexander Schiff, said Satchmo made the two-hour air trip without trouble but he should get some rest today.

Armstrong was struck by pneumonia June 23 and two days later passed through two crises brought on by complications his doctors termed "cardiac disturbances."

RED-FACED PATIENTS

London - (UPI) - The West Suffolk Federation of Women's Institute is asking the government to provide National Health Service doctors with soundproof walls. The institute says that at present the doctors' comments usually can be heard by everyone in the waiting room.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Suicide in British Students

A writer in a recent number of the British Medical Journal is concerned over the high suicide rate among male university students in England, and he enumerates the possible causes. He speaks of ill-fated love-affairs, worries over money, difficulties in making proper grades in school, moral perplexities, and the strain of social adjustment that students from poor families sometimes experience when they start to associate with men from good families. But as the writer says, these troubles shouldn't cause any normal lad to commit suicide. One might suspect that in some cases there is disharmony within the family, but, actually, over half of the suicidal youngsters break down nervously in spite of good relationships at home.

Some of the students have trouble due to laziness, or to too many outside interests, or a wrong choice of subjects for study, or emotional upsets. Some cannot face failure when it comes to them; some have such difficulties with sexual adjustments that they develop a fear of sex, and many a one is appalled when he discovers he is homosexual. Doubtless the main difficulty with most of these students is that they have a hereditary tendency to a depression. As I show in my recent book, which is based on a study of what happened in a nervous way to the many members of over 600 nervous families, there are many families in which two or three members have taken their own life.
