Spectator Wins Baseball Game

Fredonia, N.Y. - (UPI) - Chet Wright went to the Fredonia-Southwestern high school baseball game as a spectator and wound up the winning pitcher.

Wright, a five-foot, 95-pound freshman, failed to earn a spot in the Fredonia outfield so he watched the game from the stands.

In the fifth inning, the southwestern team started banging away at the Fredonia pitcher. Coach Roger Moore, desperate, beckoned to Wright.

The little right hander quickly donned a uniform, strolled to the mound and calmly pitched 2 2/3 innings of relief. Wright gained credit for the victory, with Fredonia scoring three runs in the sixth inning for a 7-6 decision. Wright also won a regular job on the Fredonia team.

Miniature Railroad Brings Chicken Feed

Fall River, Mass. - (UPI) - The traditional picture of the farmer's wife throwing grain to the chickens is a thing of the past, at least on the poultry farm of John N. Costa. Costa has a new installation that blows the feed from the farmyard into a storage bin on the top floor of the hen house. The feed is dispensed to the chickens on a miniature electric railroad system which deposits a given amount of food in each section of the three-story house.

The Costas not only don't throw the feed to the chickens any more, they don't even handle it.

Ike's Signature on Farm Bill Expected
Washington - (UPI) - President Eisenhower is expected to sign quickly a $4,686,600,000 compromise farm money bill which contains a watered down limitation on the price support payments a farmer may collect.
The measure was worked out by a congressional conference committee after the Senate and House approved conflicting versions. The Senate passed a compromise by voice vote Tuesday. The House followed suit after an hour of debate.
The measure would impose a limit of $50,000 on amount of government price support benefits a farmer may receive on each crop declared surplus by the agriculture secretary.
