Columbia River Fishery Program Recommended

Portland - (UPI) - A record-breaking number of delegates to the 39th annual convention of the Western Association of Fish and Game Commissioners here today heard recommendations compiled by the Interior Department of a review of the Columbia River Fishery Development program.

The report was prepared for delivery by Ross L. Leffler, assistant Secretary of the Interior, but he was detained in Washington, D. C., and it was read by John I. Hodges, chief of the branch of Columbia River Fisheries, bureau of commercial fisheries.

Recommendations

The recommendations included:

That stream improvement activities be expanded above McNary dam, including stream clearance, laddering of falls and diversion screening.

That further hatchery construction under the development program be deferred for "the time being" pending determination of the effectiveness of the lower river hatchery program, and until the more serious fish diseases are brought under control.

That greater emphasis be placed on research, particularly in fish disease, nutrition and program appraisal.

The program, administered by the Fish and Wildlife Service, is a coordinated effort of the fish and game agencies of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and the Service.

Student Plagued By Scholarships

St. Paul, Minn. - (UPI) - Bill Delehanty, fresh out of St. Thomas College, has a unique problem: By next fall he must decide how to use $8,200 in graduate scholarships.

Bill earned the scholarships while compiling a record of almost all "A's" in a liberal arts course that emphasized history, foreign languages and debate.

He can read, write and speak French and Latin. He had two years of Greek and German. He won 70 per cent of his debates over a three-year period and received the St. Thomas "Mr. Tommy" award as the senior who best represented the school's ideals.

Tentatively, Bill plans to solve his scholarship dilemma this way: He will enter Yale as an Overbrook Fellow to study history next fall using funds from the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship.

In the fall of 1960, he will continue at Yale for his master's degree using a Danforth scholarship. Later, he will work for a doctorate, by which he hopes to be teaching at some small college.

Hormel Hams

Just heat and eat... a Hormel ham can't be beat! Each Hormel ham is carefully selected from the highest quality young, corn-fed porkers then carefully sugar-cured and hickory-smoked to bring out that famous Hormel flavor and tenderness. Taste the difference... serve a Hormel ham this weekend.

Kindergarten Level Homework Urged

Minneapolis - (UPI) - Dean Athelstan Spilhaus, University of Minnesota professor and critic of modern education has suggested starting homework at the kindergarten level to prepare the children for higher education.

Spilhaus said the kindergarten pupil could be given some simple task such as bringing some item to school the next day. The tasks would become more complex as the child moved from grade to grade and would prepare him for the work load of higher education.
