Powder Puff Pilots In 13th Annual Derby

Lawrence, Mass. (UPI)—Sixty-three light planes with women pilots at the controls took off yesterday for a flight across the nation in the 13th powder puff derby. The flying females were allowed nine designated stopovers, three of which were mandatory for all aircraft. The first of the mandatory stops was Kokomo, Ind. The women are racing against the clock and not each other. Their planes have been assigned a "par speed," based on performance data from manufacturers and aeronautical engineers, actual tests, and performance in prior air races. The handicap system gives each entrant, from the powerful twin-engine Beechcraft Bonanzas to the single-engine Piper Cubs, an equal chance. The last of the 63 planes was airborne at Lawrence at 9:33 a.m. yesterday as the women aviators, from the United States, Europe, and Australia, were waved off at less than one minute intervals. Starter Crocker Snow waved a huge green flag to send the planes on the way after each pilot had her log book stamped with the time. Most of the pilots were young married women. And, as is the custom with the Powderpuff derby, all wore colorful summer dresses and jewelry and carried handbags and lunches for the long flight. No one wore flying togs or the familiar leather helmet or goggles, though sun glasses were much in evidence. Flying was permitted only in daylight hours and planes were required to cross the Spokane finish line by noon Wednesday to be eligible for the five cash prizes and trophies. Two other mandatory stops for all flyers were at Fargo, N.D., and Helena, Mont. But in-between stops were permitted at Chicago, Rochester, Minn., Bismarck, N.D., and Miles City, Mont., at the pilot's discretion. Only four of the contestants flew solo. The others took co-pilots. Three were foreign women, two as co-pilots and one at the controls. She was Mrs. Elly Beinhorn of Freiburg-Zahr, Germany, who made a round-the-world flight in 1931. Defending champion Mrs. Frances Bera of Long Beach, Calif., flew a Beechcraft Bonanza in her quest for a fifth Powder Puff victory. The field was sprinkled liberally with Beechcraft, Cessna, and Piper Comanche planes. Most of the pilots had plenty of experience at the controls and almost all had previous derby competition. Mrs. Barbara Jenison of Paris, Ill., who has logged 900 hours flying time and was competing in her fourth derby, was a typical race contestant.
