

Sheath Dress
Good Fashion
For Shorties

United Press International
The sheath is a natural style for shorties, says Andrew Arkin, a manufacturer who specializes in petite sizes. Because the sheath will be an important silhouette for fall, he recommends that women five-feet, four-inches or under wear both sheath dresses and coats. Arkin shows full-length and seven-eighths coats.

Fall evening hats are a boon to women who usually can't find a style to wear. Easiest to wear are monk's caps, shown in white, black and colored satin to match the gown. The caps are stiffened for shape.

The "little black dress" has been replaced by dark stripes, checks, plaids, sombre patterns and provincial prints for the transitional summer-into-fall season. Look for burnished autumn shades, paisleys, and vivid Oriental colors.

After all the shortie night-gowns and bikini sleepwear, the "true" nightgown is back. It looks like granny's nightie - long-sleeved, full-length, ruffled, smocked and embroidered. In spite of the old-fashioned details, the gowns come in brushed, lightweight cotton blended with nylon, Dacron and/or Orlon.

Ponchos are popping up all over the loungewear and sleepwear scene. Formed as a circle or square that slips over the head, they top jump-suits, pajamas, and tights. They also double as short robes or bedjackets. Women's Wear Daily, a trade publication, predicts the college crowd will be wearing ponchos all day. Styles include fringed or banded geometric prints, houndstooth patterns, flowered prints, and solid colors. Some come with matching bandanas or slim pants.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bisseger, 210 Third street, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Christensen, 178 Winema Way, Medford.

Pastor Floyd Breesee of the Seventh Day Adventist church read the service at 4 o'clock. Two hundred and fifty guests attended. It was the first wedding ever held in the park.

A white trellis decorated with white bells and ribbons and baskets of syringia and red roses formed a background for the wedding party. The bride's attendants were Mrs. Jerald Christensen, Inglewood, Calif., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, who was matron of honor; Miss Beverly Jean Fjarli, Medford, and Miss Coral Elise Bisseger, Ashland, niece of the bride.

For the reception Mrs. Floyd Yost cut the wedding cake and Mrs. William Lefever and Miss Celeste Burrill served. Miss Sandra Burrill and Miss Sharon Bowman poured punch. Miss Rose Marie Beltz was at the guest book.

Vocal music for the service was provided by Joe Hoyt, Mrs. Al Swanburg, cousin of the bride from Woodland, Wash., and Alvy Bowman.

New Type Chair
Has Many Uses

By MARGUERITE DAVIS -
United Press International
Chicago - (UPI) - A low Scandinavian-type bench by Brown-Saltman has almost as many lives as a cat.

It opens into a chair, love seat or sectional sofa, in any variety that appeals.

The bench on display at the John R. Willis Co. seems to be merely a bench of dark brown walnut, 69 inches long and 16 1/2 inches high, with three insets of stark white plastic.

But each inset opens to become a cushioned chair, with a back 19 1/2 inches high and a seat 26 inches deep. The back can be opened while the bench is flush against the wall.

Raise the middle inset and the hostess has a comfortable chair with a moisture resistant end table on either side.

The bench, part of the "Variations" line, can be bought in as many units as the purchaser wishes, with inserts of white plastic or walnut, or both. With three seating units, the price ranges from $318 to $408, depending on the material chosen to cover the cushions.

Arms which lock in place and are interchangeable, right or left, may be added at a charge of $16.50 each.

The same materials, walnut and plastic, are used in other Variations furniture - chests, tables, cabinets, night stands and bed headboards with or without bookcase compartments. Chests and cabinets of varying sizes can be combined under a single top or placed side by side with legs or without, to meet many space requirements.

Let's talk
dry cleaning"

By KEN HARDY
The 4th of July recalls many things most important of all, the birth of our nation through the war of independence. It is a day on which we celebrate our freedom, remembering that it was not won easily . . . and it is still a day when our constant united effort to preserve it.

For many of us, the 4th also recalls other memories, of picnics, brass bands, patriotic speeches, and, of course, fireworks. Nowadays the use of fireworks is more controlled than it was years ago, and there are fewer accidents. But some kinds of firecrackers are still dangerous things in inexperienced hands.

And speaking of potentially dangerous explosives brings up another subject we've been meaning to mention, the matter of inflammable home cleaning fluids. Most of those now sold are gasoline or cleaners' naphtha. A pint has the explosive power of a pound of dynamite. The fumes alone are dangerous, and even the friction of rubbing a garment can cause a static spark that will make an inflammable fluid explode.

So just as you're careful about your children playing with fireworks, be careful with cleaning fluids. Let your dry cleaner clean your clothes . . . safely! Bring your garments in for the lowest cleaning cost . . . or call us for pickup and delivery. BIG Y CLEANERS, 1928 Table Rock rd., Phone SP 3-1919. S&H Green Stamps.
