Miss Carrie Beekman, 93, early-day resident of Jacksonville, whose father, C. C. Beekman, founded the historic Beekman bank in the gold rush days, died Sunday, July 12, in Portland, where she had lived for the last 40 years.

Miss Beekman was the granddaughter of William Hoffman, one of the founders and first elders of the Jacksonville Presbyterian church. Through the years, though no longer a resident here, she continued to send money to the church to aid in its support.

She was well known in the area for her benevolent acts and her interest in the church caused her to purchase a large organ, which she had shipped from Vermont, for use in the church during the early days. The organ is now on display in the Jacksonville museum.

During the time when records were nearly non-existent in the west, Miss Beekman had a collection of some of the finest music that had been recorded. Cared for workers.

It is said that she cared for and clothed many children and had continued to care for those who had worked for the Beekman family long after their services had ended.

Her home in Jacksonville has been kept in perfect order, awaiting her arrival at any moment. Though she had lived in Portland many years, returning to Jacksonville in the summer of 1936 for the last time, her interests in the community had remained alive.

Survivors include five cousins, George E. Bronaugh, Eugene; Mrs. John Walker, Eugene; Mrs. Thomas C. Ross, Central Point; Mrs. Edric T. Dailey and Mrs. Ira C. Ide, both of Dundee, N.Y.
