BROADCASTS IN ITALIAN

New York—(UPI)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt made what she said was her first public talk in Italian Wednesday—a local radio interview opposing Tammany leader Carmine De Sapio. Mrs. Roosevelt said she had learned the language in school in England as a girl. Arnold Hartley, vice president of the Italian-language station WOV, said her delivery was "grammatically perfect Italian but, like Mrs. Roosevelt's French, delivered in unmistakable American accents."

NO HELP FOR HI-YOS

Hollywood — (UPI) — The Lone Ranger has Tonto to help him but children competing in a contest to see who can yell "Hi Yo Silver" the loudest have to do it all on their own. The Lone Ranger TV program said "no" to a mother who inquired whether her twin babies could accompany her 10-year-old son to the contest because "he can shout better with babies crying in the backround."

Small Worlds Around Us

By Lynn M. Watkins

The Cowslip, or Marsh Marigold, Hardy Plant

I never found out just why it was called "cowslip," except that cows, who show a distinct liking for the leaves, flower and stems of this semi-aquatic plant, would probably do a great deal of slipping and sliding down the bank of the creek in order to reach the plant.

Just about every section of the country where cowslip grows has a popular name for this plant. One very poetic name is marsh-gold. Some folks call it mary-buds, and others, marsh marigold. The golden yellow blossoms are shaped like buttercups. Confusing the cowslip business somewhat, is the fact that several plants of various kinds are also called cowslips.

The plant grows in ditches, swamps, marshes, in the near-shore waters of small ponds, and even in wet meadows or wherever the ground is springy and water-soaked. The cowslip takes advantage of early morning insects by opening its blossoms shortly after dawn, offering nectar to all who come, and staying open throughout the entire day.

Receives Insects

Flies of several varieties, bees of a dozen kinds, and an assortment of butterflies and beetles visit the simple blossom. And in return for the nectar received the insects carry the pollen and pollinate the cowslip colonies in some distant, wet meadow. The flower stem is hollow, the leaves round or slightly kidney-shaped and very fresh and green.

The flowerbuds of the cowslip have been used as a garnish or in the seasoning of foods. They are slightly similar to the caper that grows on a shrub in the Mediterranean countries. Although they lack the tang of the true caper, they resemble it in outward appearance. They find a place, too, in "white sauce."

Grandmother never stuffed the pickled buds of the cowslip in a rolled up filet of anchovy, as is done with the real capers, but she gained a measure of piquancy to early spring meals by the liberal use of the pickled buds of the "marsh marigold."

Pot-Herbs

It was in the spring, too, when the leaves and stems of the cowslip were tender that baskets of them were gathered, to be later cooked with smoked meats as "greens." Then they were called "pot-herbs."

The marsh marigold, which really isn't a marigold at all is no temperamental plant of domesticity. Rather it is a hardy pioneer, thriving in a wet environment, proudly holding aloft its simple, golden head where the ground is springy and the spring peeper frogs serenade the first timid step into summer.

Ike Urged to Aid Mining Industry

Washington—(UPI)—The House Interior Committee has urged President Eisenhower to take immediate steps to increase production and employment in the "critically depressed" mining industry.

The committee unanimously adopted a resolution stating that an emergency exists in the domestic mining industry which could have "a depressing effect" on the entire economy.

The resolution asked Eisenhower to advise Congress as soon as possible to actions he takes, and to submit any reorganization plans or legislation he considers necessary.

It blamed low domestic prices, reduced production and high unemployment on increased foreign production of some metals, coupled with a downward revision of the government's stockpile requirements.

Production Index At Record Level

Washington —(UPI)— Industrial production rose to a record high in June for the fourth straight month, the Federal Reserve Board has reported.

Output of autos, household durables and business equipment increased. Activity in other lines held steady at generally high levels. The only exceptions were drops in crude ore and steel production.

The board's index of factory, mine and mill activity, based on a 1947-49 average of 100, rose two points to a June level of 155. This was 10 per cent higher than in June, 1958.

A lengthy steel strike now could knock the index down sharply.

SOLDIER SHAVES RECORD

London —(UPI)— British Army Lt. Barry Lynch Wednesday raced from Paris to London in 57 minutes, three seconds—a new record in the 11-day Bleriot Jubilee race sponsored by the London Daily Mail. Lynch, using a motorcycle, a helicopter and a jet plane for the trip, shaved 44 seconds from the old record set Monday by Capt. R. B. Walker of the British Army.

Banfield Freeway Speed Signs Posted

Portland—(UPI)—Speed limit signs began to go up along the Banfield freeway Wednesday and Oregon State Highway Department crews expected to have the job done here today.

The indicated speed signs were designated recently by an Oregon Speed Control Board resolution.

Posted speeds of 55 miles per hour are in effect to 102nd ave. from the undercrossing at Northeast Grand, and beyond 102nd to Arata rd., the speed limit is 70 miles an hour.
