

Intrigued by the prospect of seeing and touring the new theater being completed for the 1959 season of the Oregon Shakespearean festival, about 1,200 persons were on hand in Ashland July 12 for the annual Bard's Heyday. Entertainment was provided throughout the afternoon and evening by the festival dancers, and they are shown here during one of the performances. Also pictured is part of a group of guests touring the theater; about 800 made the guided tours to see the new building and hear about plans for the plays. The Heyday is sponsored by Tudor guild as a festival benefit.

Gold Hill Group Hears Attorney Talk on Youth

Gold Hill - "Building character; Youth" was the title of the lesson presented at the last meeting of the Woman's Society of the Gold Hill Community Methodist church. The group met Friday, July 10 at the home of Mrs. Roy Eskew.

Guest speaker was Dewey Wilson, Medford attorney, who is past chairman of the executive committee of the advisory council to the juvenile court. He served in this capacity 1956-1958.

His talk was in conjunction with the topic of the afternoon's lesson. He spoke about the causes of juvenile delinquency and what can be done to prevent it. The speaker said early training in the home is important in building character; and that it is of general importance that children know parents are proud of them. The influence of neighbors and grandparents is also an important factor, he said.

A question and answer period followed the informative talk of the guest speaker.

Mrs. Ervin Hoffman, president of the group, conducted the business session. The Rev. James F. Eubanks Jr., pastor of Gold Hill Community Methodist church, and Mrs. Ferd Jones were in charge of the worship period.

A number of activities were planned by the group. The first will be a reception in the church dining room, Sunday, July 19, honoring the Rev. and Mrs. Eubanks. It will be held immediately following the eleven o'clock worship service.

Two fund-raising projects were arranged. An ice cream social will be held on the lawn at the church Saturday, August 1. Plans are underway to hold a rummage sale as another means of raising needed funds. Mrs. Paul Molloy, Mrs. Arthur Boye and Mrs. Ted Schoenemann were named to this committee. Anyone having suitable articles of rummage may contact one of these women.

age. Mrs. Kermit Bickel is chairman for this project.

The August meeting of the Society will be held at the church.

The session at the Eskew home was an outdoor affair, and refreshments were served by the hostess. Visitors were Mrs. Lexie Mizell, Redding, Calif., Mrs. Jack Thomas and Mrs. Raymond Ritter, both Gold Hill.

Mrs. Hoffman will attend a training school at Camp Magruder, Barview, Ore., July 19 through July 24.

Ed Sullivan Lauded For Offering of Miniature Spoleto Festival on TV

By FRED DANZIG
UPI Correspondent
New York - (UPI) - Sunday night on CBS-TV, Ed Sullivan offered his own miniature Spoleto Festival (not to be confused with the Spoleto Festival produced by composer Gian Carlo Menotti) despite the pre-show publicity.

Performances Taped
Sullivan recruited Eileen Farrell, John Gielgud, ballet dancers, opera singers, a chorus and symphony orchestra and taped their performances in and around the picturesque Italian town. While the talent didn't venture far afield artistically - except for the magnificent Miss Farrell, who displayed a fine jazz voice - the hour still had an adventurous and rewarding impact. This idea of videotaping a one-hour show in a town like Spoleto, Italy, remains an exciting one and deserves to be done more often, with or without a "festival" for an excuse. "So: Bon voyage, Ed."

Phil Silvers has signed for four one-hour CBS-TV specials next season. Nat Hiken, creator of the Sgt. Bilko series, is writing the first special, set for Saturday, Oct. 17.

Medford Family Sees Queen

Mr. and Mrs. Eston B. Humphrey and family, Walter, John and Martha, have returned to their home on Ross lane after a vacation trip in Canada and reported on seeing Queen Elizabeth of England and Prince Philip while in Victoria, B.C.
The Humphreys were among those who saw the Queen and her entourage leave the Empress hotel in Victoria during the royal visit in that city. It took about nine limousines to carry the group and they were headed by four red-jacketed Royal Canadian Mounted policemen on motorcycles. The Queen and others were on their way to a garden party.
The Humphreys, who stood about 20 feet from the Queen, were greatly impressed with her beauty and report that she has "a flawless complexion." For the party she was wearing a salmon-colored dress, a small white hat, white gloves and carried a white parasol. Prince Philip, known as one of the handsomest men in public life, is deeply tanned, the family noted.
Women who rode in the cars following the Queen and Prince wore pretty summer frocks and elaborate hats. The men either wore military uniforms or dark suits with red carnations or ribbon badges.
"The whole procession was a thrilling spectacle and was not only interesting from the standpoint of getting to see royalty at close range but to view the friendly, yet almost reverent, respect the Canadians have for their beloved royal family," Mrs. Humphrey said this morning. "As a rule, Americans give vent to our feelings upon seeing a public figure by loud clapping or whistling, etc. But when the Queen came into view on the red velvet-covered steps of the hotel, there was nothing more than a light, murmuring sigh from the crowd and a few applauded. Then a hush came over the crowd as she proceeded to her car. Our family feels fortunate to have seen this very charming couple."
En route north the Humphreys stopped in Portland for Centennial events, and then continued to Vancouver, B.C. There they visited Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Little of South Burnaby. Mr. Little, who is a restaurateur for the Canadian Airlines, had charge of arranging the meals for Queen Elizabeth and the royal party while they were in Vancouver.
After a tour of the area's parks, the Humphreys took a steamer from Horseshoe Bay for Nanaimo, from where they motored to Victoria.
